XXXIVth CONGRESS—First Session.

SENATE....WASHINGTON, Tuesday, March 4.

FORTIFICATIONS.

THE TENNESSEE ELECTION CASE.

The Illinois election case was then considered.

Mr. STUART contended that the Constitution of Illinois renders Mr. TUMULTY ineligible.

Messrs. BUTLER, TOOMBS and SEWARD severally spoke to the effect that the power to elect a Senator is derived from the Constitution of the United States, not from Illinois, therefore, the latter has no power to prescribe the qualifications of Senators—neither to add to, diminish nor modify the requirements of the Federal Constitution; consequently Mr. TUMULTY's claim to the seat should be maintained.

SPECIAL SESSION OF THE STATE COUNCIL—EXPRESSIONS OF OPINION AS REGARDS TO THE NATIONAL NOMINATIONS.

BOSTON, Tuesday, March 4.

The American Council of Massachusetts commenced a special session in this city to-day. About 500 delegates were present. The council organized at 10 A. M. and adjourned till afternoon, when the delegates to the National Convention commenced to explain their course and position in that body with regard to the nomination of candidates for President and Vice-President.

Mr. A. A. ROBINSON, of Adams, delegate at large, was the first speaker. After giving his account of the proceedings, and speaking of his opposition to the platform, he said that he remained in the Convention until they nominated a man for the Presidency whom he had least expected to see nominated—one, so far as he had yet been informed, who is not identified with the American Party. He left the Convention more in sorrow than in anger, for he could not be in favor of the Springfield platform, and yet support the nomination of one supposed to be opposed to that platform. If he could have assented to the nomination without a sacrifice of principle, he would have done it willingly. He was still warmly in favor of American principles, but it was for the Council to decide whether he (Mr. ROBINSON) was to be forced to cut aloof from his old friends, or whether the American Party lives or dies.

Mr. S. M. ALLEN, one of the District delegates, said that before he joined the American Party he was a Union Whig, and an admirer of DANIEL WEBSTER. He preferred Judge McLEAN, of Ohio, as the American candidate, believing him to be a man the Americans of Massachusetts would support; and one who could carry the Union. He believed the protestations of the Southern delegates, that they would go home and work for the election of Mr. FILLMORE, were insincere, and expressed the opinion that they would labor for the success of the Democratic candidate, and thus sustain their Nebraska platform.

Mr. A. B. ELY, of the Fifth District, was the next speaker. He said that Mr. FILLMORE was not his choice. He voted for Commodore STOCKTON and GARRET DAVIS, and after the nomination he came home dissatisfied, but, upon considering the whole ground, he felt it his duty to support the nomination. He made some statements in reference to Mr. FILLMORE's devotion to American principles, and announced his adhesion to the nominations.

Mr. J. M. KEITH, of District Four, followed in favor of indorsing the nominations. He believed that neither of the candidates would see the rights of the North invaded.

Pennsylvania Democratic State Convention.

HARRISBURG, Tuesday, March 4.

The Democratic State Convention assembled this morning and organized, with J. POSTER BROWNLEE as temporary Chairman. After the disposal of the contested seats, a Committee was appointed to select permanent officers, and the Convention adjourned till 3 o'clock.

The Committee on organization reported HENDRICK B. WRIGHT for President, with twenty-seven Vice-Presidents and thirteen Secretaries. The roll was called, and members expressed their preferences in regard to the candidate for the Presidency, with the following result: BUCHANAN, 126; DALLAS, 5; and one for the nominee of the National Convention.

On motion, a Committee was appointed to report the names of fifty-four Representative and four Senatorial Delegates from each Congressional District to the National Convention, and also the names of Electors.

On motion of Mr. DAWSON, a Committee of thirteen was appointed to report resolutions.

THE GRAND MUSICAL FESTIVAL IN BOSTON.

Inauguration of Crawford's Statue of Beethoven.

BOSTON, Monday, March 3, 1856.

The grand event which has stirred the musical heart of Boston for some months, and caused, for a time at least, all art talk to run into a worthy channel, came off on Saturday—namely, the inauguration of CRAWFORD's statue of BEETHOVEN at the Music Hall. In New-York this event has been looked forward to with great interest. Much was expected from the Bostonians, and it was believed that the Athens of America would come out as particularly strong that poor New-York would hold its head in shame and self reproach. This consolation was arrived at on very great provocation. A liberal minded citizen had stepped forward and generously given to his fellow-citizens an art monument, a work which should forever direct their attention to the excellent and the grand. A day had been selected for the acceptance of this gift in a proper musical way. The Statue was to be unveiled to the measured cadence of a symphony composed for the occasion, and the musical world of Boston was to unite in a worthy utterance of those sublime strains by which BEETHOVEN gained his immortality in Europe, and his first public honor in this country.

It was with no ordinary feelings of satisfaction, that I took my place in the case as your special correspondent. They were rather crowded, but this I did not object to. The promise of the coming event justified a crowd. I was a little astonished, I confess, when I discovered that most of my suppositions were "way passengers," whose direction was towards commerce rather than art. By the time we had reached Boston, I found that there would not be the slightest occasion to bivouac on the Common, (a fertile, but decidedly uncomfortable spot at present, for all the city snow is piled up there.) There was no unusual run on the hotels. They were not overflowing with excited worshippers of the heaven-smiling composer. All Boston wore its accustomed air of sedateness. Not a cigar was to be seen in the street; not a remarkable looking beard, not any one of those singularities of costume and mien which I have noticed in the attendants of all European Musical Festivals. Here and there I saw a few modest looking handbills, announcing that the Inauguration would take place on Saturday, the 1st, but there was nothing jubilant about them. They were as suggestive as texts, and as brief. Immediately after my arrival, I met Mr. SAUVEE, the eminent pianist, and in a spirit of perfect confidence, launched a hundred questions at him. To my surprise, he knew nothing whatever of the arrangements that had been made. He was not invited to assist, nor had he even received a ticket to attend the performance. I began to lose confidence. It was becoming evident the Inauguration would not gather together all the best representatives of the divine art in Boston. In any other city in the world the composition of an unquestionably fine artist like Mr. SAUVEE would have been considered indispensable.

The festival was organized by the direction of the Music Hall, and the Committee of the Orchestral Concerts. Its specific object, of course, was the Inauguration of CRAWFORD's Statue, but it had a practical object also. The orchestral concerts have not been remunerative this season, and there is a slight arrearage. This it was hoped would be covered. Both objects have been effected, and that is all that can be said.

Why the 1st of March—a day that has no connection with the composer's birth or death—was selected, I am at a loss to imagine. The Statue is intended to perpetuate the memory of the great composer, to appeal to our coarser memory by sight, as he has appealed to our finer instincts by sound. There would have been propriety therefore, in inaugurating it twenty-five days later, namely, on the 26th March, the anniversary of the composer's death. But the event would have had more significance if it had taken place on his birth day. There were, I suppose, reasons for preventing this, and I only refer to it to remind our Boston friends that they may, if they are so disposed, renew their BEETHOVEN ovations with great propriety, at some future period—in December for instance. They need another opportunity, too, for in their first attempt at a Festival they have surely failed.

The ceremonies were of a somewhat rigid character, for the reason that the dramatic element was wanting. What should have been impressive, was, in consequence, somewhat slow. At 7 o'clock the Hall was filling, at 7½ it was full;—not crowded, but comfortably and excitingly full. A chorus of a hundred and sixty singers are in the orchestra, forming an animated background to the Statue which stands in the centre on a pedestal six feet high. In front stand the instrumentalists (fifty in number) at their desks tuning their instruments, and moving about the platform in an unpleasantly familiar manner. Every one is talking. The ladies in the orchestra pointing out to each other their various friends in the body of the house, whilst the latter are absorbed in the contemplation of the real flowers with which the platform is decorated, or in making mere critical remarks on the artificial ones which adorn the heads of their neighbors. At the back of the orchestra, (against the organ screen,) is a semicircle inscribed with the name of BEETHOVEN, done in flowers in the horticultural show style. Underneath is a lyre, and beneath this, festoons, garlands and bouquets. The perfume from this floral display is plainly perceptible, and excites some comment, but I can hear no one connecting an odor with any musical sense. Very little musical comment has been elicited, I suppose, by the floral world's contribution, but the "good manners" principle will not allow it. Not one which comes from the adjacent chairs, and, I suppose, not in Mr. BEETHOVEN's case, no invitation was addressed to them. If the musical resources of Boston were equal to the demands of a great Festival, there would be no room to object to; but this is not the fact, and what is still worse, the best of what can be furnished there was not secured. But a military name was on the programme that is known outside the musical world in of the "peak measure." The Festival in short was nothing but an instrument of a humanitarian and philanthropic character, and partaking of the nature of a public institution rather than a musical effort.

The first necessity was a good interpretation of whatever work might be undertaken, and, above all, a conscientious regard to the author's text. I will show how the Bostonians interpreted this necessity. They played three movements of the ninth Symphony, thereby leaving BEETHOVEN with the intimation that the fourth movement was not worth playing. Every amateur knows that this sublime work is remarkable for massive vocal effects in the last or fourth movement. The introduction of these vocal effects is prepared by wonderful instrumentation in the three first movements, particularly for those instruments which nearest approach the human voice. In this way the vocal attributes of the Symphony increase with every bar in a perfectly natural manner, until at length they culminate and burst forth in a sublime choral "Praise of Joy" in the fourth movement. The Symphony was written expressly for the great Hall, and was, in consequence, christened the "Choral Symphony." Imagine the barbarism of leaving out the very movement which justifies the name. I am aware that in the lager-bier gardens of Germany the three movements are very frequently played, the fourth being omitted for lack of a chorus. But this excuse cannot be pleaded by the Bostonians. They have a fine chorus. The more I try to account for this wanton mutilation of a great work, the more I am lost in surprise. With far less resources the entire ninth symphony was performed here three years ago by the Germania Society, under the direction of Mr. CARL BERGMANN. Why could it not be done now? Mr. ZERRAHN had an orchestra of 65 performers, and a chorus of 160 voices. In Boston fond of its artists as well as its amateurs, or who is determined to perpetuate the joke of the play of "Hamlet" with the character of Hamlet omitted!

The three movements patronized by the Committee were taken in regular rotation, and were extremely well played, under Mr. ZERRAHN's somewhat metronomic direction. The orchestra being numerically weak, however, the effects were necessarily thin (except the horn passages, which were thick enough.) Conceding that it was necessary to mutilate the Symphony, it would have been better, I think, to have changed the position of the movements, by placing the third between the first and second. The magnificent Scherzo would have made a more acceptable finale than the Adagio. By ending with a slow movement, everything that followed seemed to get slower and slower, and in fact everything did.

Mrs. LOVE, a lady who has a good and well-trained voice, but no dramatic style, sang the Grand Recitation and aria from "Fidelio," "To what new and dreadful crime." This extremely difficult morceau has always been considered a test piece by all great singers, and requires something more than ordinary capacity. It was, I am bound to add, beyond Mrs. LOVE's powers. There was an orchestral accompaniment to this scene, but in the next piece, a Quartette from the Italian opera, the piano only was used. It was thought better to inflict another mutilation on BEETHOVEN than to exhaust the valuable energies of the instrumentalists. Mr. FRANCO, a very excellent violinist, played the Violin Concerto in an admirable manner, and succeeded in winning from the rapidly cooling audience a genuine round of applause. But even he expressed his dissatisfaction with plain BEETHOVEN by introducing a fanciful cadenza. Then came the Hallelujah Chorus from the "Mount of Olives." Why this chorus was selected when a better could be found in the same oratorio, I am at a loss to imagine. The chorus was vigorously given, but there was a little uncertainty in the leading of the tenors. There are some splendid voices in the Boston Choral Societies; better than we have in New-York.

The last item in the programme was the Fantasia for piano, chorus and orchestra, entitled the "Praise of Harmony." The piano part was taken by Mr. C. C. PERKINS, the donor of the Statue, or rather the lower part of it. Mr. PERKINS is an amateur, a man of wealth, cultivation and private worth. He has studied music with true devotion, and has produced some fine compositions, of which I am unable to speak. There can be no doubt that the presence of such a gentleman in any community is in the highest degree favorable to art, but his presence in the concert-room did not strike one as being equally advantageous. Mr. PERKINS is not a pianist fit for the concert-room, although he may be very acceptable in the parlor. I tried to detect one good point in his playing, but in vain. He is heavy, uncertain and expressionless. The latter defect alone is sufficient, for in this Fantasia expression is a little important. I should be more sparing in my remarks were I not informed on competent authority that Mr. PERKINS never played so well as on this night.

It is to be regretted that on an occasion like the present Mr. PERKINS should have attained to performs at all, for apart from considerations of capability the mere fact was apt to be ungenerously misconstrued. It would be a thousand pities that any gratitude to such a man should be cooled by criticism, and yet by appearing in the double capacity of patron and artist he exposed himself to that risk. How keenly the Bostonians are alive to the value of Mr. PERKINS as a citizen was testified in the genuine tumult of applause which greeted his entrance on the platform.

I have left much unsaid that might be said with perfect propriety; but in all probability have written more than will satisfy the good people here. I am sure, however, that I have not exaggerated the failure of the ceremonies attendant on the inauguration of CRAWFORD's Statue of BEETHOVEN, and I am sure also, that the musical community of Boston will indorse this assertion. The failure can be attributed to several causes, but to one in particular I must refer. Mr. PERKINS, the part donor of the Statue, has in reality had the entire conduct of the Festival. Trusting to his own influence, and led away by a narrow estimate of the occasion, he has harmlessly enough placed the entire community in a ridiculous position. There were plenty here who knew that failure would result from the absurdly inefficient nature of the arrangements, but they naturally experienced a delicacy in remonstrating with a gentleman who intended to do good, however clumsily he set about it. Here, then, was the difficulty. Mr. PERKINS stood in the way, and no one liked to tell him of the fact. I feel no delicacy in doing so, for I confess that my respect for a patron that erects a statue to the honor of a man whose works he consents to mutilate, is by no means humbling. If the conduct of the Festival had been intrusted to competent hands, it would not have commenced with three movements of a Symphony, nor terminated with the sleepy strains of a piano.

☞ We don't realize what a blessing these cool mornings of March—the last lingering glances of Winter—are to us. The bracing air makes the blood circulate freely through the veins and lends a glow and ruddiness to the complexion which, for the matter of cosmetics, out-Phalons PHALON. The ladies look so bright and blooming as we meet them in our morning walk, that we have really been almost induced to believe them Goddesses of Spring come to scatter roses on the grave of the departed season. And as for the men—the young sprigs look springer than ever—the bucks forget for the nonce the miseries of tight boots and close-fitting garments, and march along with an unfashionably upright carriage and elastic step,

"As merry as a grig
And brisk as bottled ale."

Everything seems to feel the influence of the weather. Even the poor omnibus horses inhale the clear atmosphere as if it revived and enlivened them as much as the merciless goad which, from the same general cause, their drivers apply to their uncomminerated flanks with renewed energy and cruelty. The poor beasts have had a Crimean Winter of it; their ranks have been decimated; laboriously they have struggled over the ramparts of ice and snow which have obstructed their daily progress; Malakoffs and Redans have been successively overcome only to bring them face to face with new battlements equally formidable. But at length "Sebastopol has fallen!" most of the fortifications have been leveled with the ground, and the prospects of peace in the shape of a general thaw are brightening with the sun every day. Meanwhile the enemy presents a determined front, but as long as he metaphorically wastes his warfare to blowing gentle blasts on his Northern trumpets, which only serve to enliven us with their martial airs, we are content that everything should remain in statu quo until the preliminaries of the coming Spring are signed.

Special Correspondence of the N. Y. Daily Times.

PARIS, Monday, Feb. 18, 1856.

I mentioned to you, some three weeks ago, that of the Middle of DAVID D'ANGERS, a considerable number of young men, principally artists and students, made a demonstration, somewhat political around the [illegible] "Vive la Liberté!" "Vive la Liberté!" were heard by the [illegible] were made. M. Gonzalès, the [illegible] Journal, was distinctly heard to say, "Vive la Liberté!" and for this he was three days ago tried before one of the Paris Tribunals. In order that you may have some idea of the progress of liberty in this country, under the Emperor, I give you, in a condensed form, the judgment of the Court: 1. "Inasmuch as any cry made in public, no matter what may be the political opinions, and the governmental views, may, however, be considered as a seditious cry if it appears from the circumstances that the man who uttered it designed to provoke disorder and to instigate a manifestation hostile to the Government; 2. Inasmuch as the cry of 'Vive la Liberté!' may, more than any other, possess the character of a seditious cry, since it may be interpreted in the most diverse and culpable ways, according to the political doctrines and the passions of the one who pronounces it and in presence of whom he utters it; 3. Inasmuch as, [illegible] these circumstances, the cry of 'Vive la Liberté!' cannot be explained, as the cry of 'Vive le Roi!' [illegible] but rather as a seditious manifestation, sufficiently indicated, furthermore, by the [illegible] of the prisoner;" the Court condemned the prisoner to three months' imprisonment and [illegible] fine.

The Tribunal of Correctional Police has lately made a couple on the press, which may be [illegible] and deserved little. M. RAYNE [illegible] Les Filles de Paris," written with a moral view," CAHOT, his publisher, and JACQUIN, the printer, were severely punished for the immoral publication in question. The quotations made in [illegible] giving an idea of what constitution in France an "attack on public morals and good manners." But English types would not bear them.

The author received a verdict of three months' imprisonment and 500 francs fine; his coadjutors [illegible] each.

BOUDIN, GOUPIL and VILLEMESSANT, editors of the Figaro, were also tried for an attack against the public morals and good manners," and condemned each to a month's imprisonment and 500 francs fine. The offence on which this punishment was thought was contained in an anecdote respecting of a certain lady, whose name was not mentioned, but in which "the foundation as well as the style contained encroachments on public morals."

THOU, the publisher, editor of the Pantomorphe, was tried for an offence against public morals contained in the [illegible] of an article published in that journal. The Court only reprimanded the editor, and condemned the publisher to pay the costs.

On the 27th of last month, we may calculate that the Paris press will be less equivocal in the form, if not in the spirit, of its utterances.

A SINGULAR [illegible].

A correspondent in the Government journal complains that the publication of "The Old French Poets," at the expense of the Government. The collection will [illegible] volumes of 20,000 verses each. The first volume will contain the national poems which represent the chivalric manners of France and England, [illegible] "the imagination of our fathers in the epopeia of our own time," that is to say, the epoch of CHARLEMAGNE and the epoch of ARTHUR. Each is followed with the poems of antiquity, epics and poetics, shared between the remarkable [illegible] of the Bible and the most important epochs of Greek and Roman history, from HANNIBAL to ATTILA. Then will follow the cycle of adventures. The last will [illegible] the satirical and allegorical poems, such as the "Romance of the Fox," and the "Romance of the Rose." A special series will be devoted to the theater [illegible], and another to the drama.

[illegible] OF MRS. BIDDWAY.

The Court of Assizes has, within the last fortnight, been occupied for the three days in VALERY and M. DE LAVY, Counsel of the Civil Tribunal defendant that Madame BIDDWAY, with of an American [illegible] relative of the late Duchess de PRASLIN, and consequently was entitled, as well as they, to share in the division of her property, amounting to about [illegible] francs. The facts have already been published, and the following short sketch will enable you to understand the case. The Duchess, it appears, was the daughter of the late M. and Mme. DE MAUCOMBLE, whose name was ELIZABETH, was married to WILLIAM MOORE and SARAH LLOYD, and Mrs. BIDDWAY is the granddaughter of WILLIAM MOORE, son of the said WILLIAM MOORE and SARAH LLOYD. The appellant [illegible] on the allegation that WILLIAM MOORE and SARAH LLOYD were married, to the satisfaction of a Protestant clergyman, and consequently THOMAS MOORE was the legitimate heir, and that Madame BIDDWAY's claim to relationship through him could not stand. It was admitted that there was no formal registration by parish [illegible] made in France, of the marriage of WILLIAM MOORE and SARAH LLOYD; but a family Bible was produced, in which WM. MOORE had written that the said marriage took place in Philadelphia, 15th December, 1787, and that the [illegible] were born of it—THOMAS in January, 1788, and [illegible] in March, 1794. It was shown that WM. MOORE and SARAH LLOYD had always lived together and been considered as man and wife; that WM. MOORE himself, who was a friend of theirs, had so regarded them, and that they had [illegible] in that capacity; and it was stated that according to American and Protestant customs, these circumstances must be considered proofs of legal marriage; it was also shown that SARAH LLOYD, who was a Quakeress, had been expelled from the Society of Friends, not for any immorality, but partly for having been married by a priest, and partly for having worn a wedding ring, which the rules of Quakerism "allowed herself to be married by a priest." The Imperial Court yesterday decided that the Tribunal was right in its judgment, and it ordered the division of the late Duchess' property to be at once proceeded to.

Mrs. BIDDWAY thus falls sole heir to the Duchess of PRASLIN, on the maternal side, and is entitled to equal shares of her property with the two heirs on the paternal side, the Duke DE VALSEY and M. DE LAVY. Mrs. BIDDWAY might also, if a French citizen, assume the title of Duchess DE PRASLIN, but I learn that she will take no steps to secure this title. She is, however, entitled, by her wealth, her beauty, and her position, of a leader of society among the French and foreign aristocracy, and there she gained this position as an American citizen, she has an inducement to desire to change her nationality for the sake of inheriting the deceased Duchess' title.

MARRIAGE OF ROMANCE.

Mr. HOWARD, First Secretary of the British Legation in Paris, is about to lead to the altar the English beauty, Miss [illegible]. Mr. HOWARD's first wife was the celebrated Baltimore beauty, Miss MCTAVISH, well known in the gay world of Paris, a few years ago. She was the Mrs. HOWARD, of Baltimore, who some so romantically confounded with the Miss [illegible] the first many years with the present Emperor of France. Mr. HOWARD is a member of the ancient family of that name in England, and a man of some talent. His courage is unquestioned.

A French lady of great wealth, and kind of travel and adventure, has just married a young Count, on the border of [illegible] with whom she corresponded by a telegraph of her own invention. The lady was protected, under [illegible] by a rough Zouave, for whom she at once formed an attachment. Upon the return of the Zouave's regiment, to Paris, the lady [illegible] and had [illegible] to fill [illegible] and, [illegible] in the opera, [illegible] in [illegible] apparently perfectly [illegible] and determined to be the most amusing fellow in the world.

A CARGO OF "DEAD HEADS."

(Not editors or reporters,) arrived in Paris a few days ago from Constantinople. M. BOUDIN, the learned Professor at the Garden of Plants, availing himself of the opportunity which the war in the East afforded of collecting a great variety of types of human heads, until now unrepresented in the museums of Europe, directed the persons in charge of the French Hospitals at Constantinople to make the desired collection and send it to him. These heads were preserved just as they were severed from the body by means of a new process discovered by Dr. BERT, of Paris, a relative of the late distinguished Professor of that name. The process consists in placing around the dead matter—first, earth on which sulphuric acid has been poured, and with which flowers of sulphur have afterwards been mixed; and secondly, after the earth has been placed around the object to be preserved, in pouring over the earth a certain quantity of chloroform. The case must be in lead and hermetically sealed. I saw one of these heads, of an African type, which was in a perfect state of preservation, the same as at the moment of embalmment, three months ago, in the East. The only difference was a slight change in color.

But what is singular about this process is, that it is not only useful in preserving dead bodies in hermetically-sealed cases, but after remaining a certain time in this preparation, they resist the action of the atmosphere. The process is not only useful therefore for embalming purposes, but may be applied to the preservation of meats, for culinary purposes.

HORACE VERNET'S BATTLE OF THE ALMA.

I had the pleasure, a few days ago, of being admitted to the studio of HORACE VERNET, a pleasure which I owed to an artist friend who had asked for me the privilege. I there saw the picture of the battle of the Alma, which the distinguished artist is in course of execution. In this picture the Prince NAPOLEON occupies the most prominent position. While he [illegible] in the direction of the enemy, he [illegible] in his saddle to look back at one of his Aides [illegible] been struck by a ball, and is falling from his horse. The picture does not come up [illegible] of the artist's previous efforts; but so long as the present dynasty shall remain, this will be one of the pictures à la mode.

BEAUVALLET ON RACHEL.

Another chapter of BEAUVALLET's "Rachel and the New World" has appeared, but as it relates entirely to the voyage and the doings on shipboard, I do not send it to you.

PASKIEWITSCH AND THE POOR ACTRESS.

By the aid of two waifs, I send you the following bit of romance in the life of the deceased Marshal: Marshal PASKIEWITSCH, who has just died at Warsaw, allowed an annual pension of 200 roubles (600fr.) to an old female residing in the Rue du Faubourg Montmartre. The origin of this liberality is rather curious. In 1814 this female, named ADELE P——, was a very pretty actress of 19, who performed the character of young girls at the Variétés. On the 15th of July of that year the foreign sovereigns who occupied Paris had a grand religious ceremony performed in the Place de la Concorde, by way of thanksgiving for the success of their arms. The sovereigns witnessed it from the balcony of the Hôtel de la Marine, and, as chief of the Holy Alliance, ALEXANDER of Russia occupied the seat of honor. Russian troops, 50,000 in number, surrounded the raised estrade which supported the altar where the Archimandrite officiated. The diversity of uniforms, the drums, the military bands, the salvos of artillery, the chanting of the clergy, and the presence of the sovereigns formed a curious spectacle, to which the Parisians, and particularly the female portion of them, flocked, many of them designating the foreigners as "nos amis, les ennemis." At the head of a guard of honor occupying the estrade was placed Major-General PASKIEWITSCH, and being fatigued by the length of the ceremony, he was amusing himself with looking through an opera-glass at the persons standing about. Suddenly he observed ADELE P——, whom he had noticed at the theatre, vainly endeavoring to get into the reserved inclosure. He immediately descended from the raised platform on which he had been standing and spoke a few words to an officer, and in a few minutes after the charming actress was well placed in the front row, and replied by a gracious smile to a wave of the hand of the General. Just after, the platform on which he had been a minute or two before standing gave way beneath the weight of the persons on it, and fell with a tremendous crash. A number of persons, among whom were several superior officers, were either killed or wounded. But for the appearance of the young artiste, General PASKIEWITSCH would probably have been among the sufferers. In the evening he paid a visit to ADELE P——, and gave her a handsome brilliant as a mark of gratitude for being the means of probably saving his life. He was also in a measure indebted to her for his advancement in life, and his fortune, for his adventure having come to the ears of ALEXANDER, that monarch was persuaded that a man favored in such a manner by his lucky star was predestined to great things, and he confided to him an important command. The stars continued to be propitious to the General, who owed to chance, more than to his talents, his rapid accession to honors and dignities. But a contrary fate attended ADELE P——, for while the General was rising in the world, the actress had been seized with illness, and was ultimately compelled to quit the theatre. She was deserted by those who had before smiled on her, and was at length reduced to great distress. A last gleam of hope remained to her. From her humble dwelling she wrote a letter to Marshal PASKIEWITSCH, reminding him of the above fact, which, she said, had perhaps long escaped his recollection. In a short time, she received a letter inclosing an order on a banker in Paris for 100 roubles, with a promise that a similar sum should be remitted to her every six months, and this promise was faithfully performed. The death of the Marshal might perhaps have again thrown her into distress, had she not preceded her benefactor to the tomb. She died suddenly a few months ago.

MALAKOFF.

PROGRESS OF NEGOTIATIONS.

The Proposed Armistice—Distrust and Doubt.

From the London Morning Herald.

It seems to be now conceded that we are to have an armistice, and from that fact we may safely conclude that peace is determined on, as the advantages which will accrue to Russia from a cessation of hostilities are so great that no statesman could be blind enough or wicked enough to accede to such a measure if it be possible that hostilities are to be renewed.

These advantages consist of the following items:

1. A delay which will enable the armies of Mouravieff to be reinforced and supplied with materiel of war.

2. An opportunity of selling vast quantities of Russian produce for English gold, to assist her in carrying on the war.

3. Perhaps a facility of raising a loan upon the chance of peace.

4. An occasion for disturbing, if not breaking up, our alliance with France, and so isolating England in the councils of Europe.

5. A postponement of all military and naval operations to such a period as will render an advance upon Tiflis, the only true strategic point in Asia, difficult, if not impossible, from the setting in of the unhealthy season in the valleys of Mongrelia and Imeritia.

Surely, if the war is to be renewed, no one can for a moment suppose that all these advantages will be given to Russia, as if purposely to increase our own difficulties.

But if peace be made, for what, then, have we sacrificed 50,000 lives and 100 millions of money?

Was it for the purpose of securing the integrity of the Sultan's dominions? Surely not, for he is to forfeit his Danubian Principalities, which we may suppose will become, under our fostering care, like the best portion of his territory of which we assisted in despoiling him—Greece—a European nuisance—an anarchical nest of swindlers, pirates and brigands.

Surely, this example of our skill in organization is not one which wise men would wish to follow.

We could not have made the sacrifices alluded to, in order to secure the Sultan's independence; for all Europe, including Russia, is to interfere in regulating the internal arrangements of his empire.

The Christians, by the new improvements, are to have military service—which the great mass of them loathe—forced upon them, and are, in return, to have the Jezerah remitted, a tax which they willingly pay for the exemption they have hitherto enjoyed from an imposition which they are now desired to consider as a privilege.

The attempt to enforce these regulations may—nay, will—produce disturbances among all classes of the population, which will render a occupation of the territory and coercion of the people necessary.

In the meantime peace will be declared, and Russia, the "terrible" in reality in the proclamation of the Emperor Nicholas, will be left free to pounce upon her victim, the Ottoman Empire. We have no doubt that she will then find some new pretext for [illegible] which, in the opinion of her statesmen, will be [illegible] to justify her in the eyes of Europe.

By the treaty of the 30th of May, 1856, the Allied Powers engaged to withdraw their troops from the Turkish dominions within the eight days after the signature of peace, but will the Allies evacuate the Principalities, and leave the French at Maslak? Or, else seven) will the French leave Constantinople while General [illegible] Bashaw? We trow not, indeed.

But if we have not insisted upon the integrity or independence of the Turkish Empire, it will be said that we have got the neutralization of the Black Sea. This certainly is a great consideration, if true; but how it is to exist while Nicolaieff remains intact, and the fleet of Azoff is not to be interfered with, it puzzles our poor brains to understand. Perhaps, however, it may mean that, as we have made Russia sink her ships, we should have a new Navarino for the Turkish, so as to start the two powers upon equal terms!

Russia, we are assured, laughs at the idea of giving up her claims to the Circassian coast; and as she has advanced, by the fall of Kars, five hundred miles—from the mouth of the Attruck, now navigated by her steamers—towards Lidia, and is at this present moment a cheval on the high road of our commerce, from Trebizond to Tabriz—we do not see that she will have any great reason to complain of the proposed arrangements, and we willingly make a truce—to last until the anarchy of Turkey, occasioned by Western meddling, will render her interference in the character of a mediator, her favorite rôle, absolutely necessary.

Meanwhile, if a coolness should take place between the Western allies, and England, by Lord Palmerston's successful management, should be involved in an American war, the future disposal of the Sultan's dominions can be arranged between the three empires, and England's wishes or interests may receive but little attention at the hands of the Constantinople Congress.

Looking at all these complications, we cannot help thinking that a peace made at the present time will be very similar in its effects to the acquisition of Cabul by our troops in the Afghan war: of which event the great Duke is reported to have remarked—"As soon as you have got it, your difficulties will begin."

Let it not be said that the warnings we are giving are recent discoveries on our part, and that they come too late. Should the latter unfortunately prove to be the case, it is not our fault. As long ago as the 9th of May, 1854, nearly two years since, we anticipated that such a crisis as we now dread must come sooner or later, and although events have marched more slowly than we calculated on, still the very words we used then will require no alteration, although the period of their becoming applicable may occur in 1856, or be postponed till 1857. Those words were:—

"Towards the Spring of the year we much dread that disaffection will have advanced with giant strides within the Territories of the Sultan—that the approaching Summer will find the Turkish empire occupied by foreign troops, to prevent anarchy—100,000 Russians, 200,000 Austrians, and perhaps 150,000 French.

"To these we may add about 40,000 English bayonets, nearly isolated, and if the policy of the present Government be persisted in—totally distrusted by all parties."

Let Englishmen remember that the policy has been persisted in, and reflect whether these are not signs that all these things are coming rapidly to a consummation.

Denial of the Rumored Disagreement between France and England.

Paris (Feb. 17) Correspondence of the London Post.

Paris is full of gossip, which will no doubt lead to many false conclusions touching the views of the Governments of France and England. Every word and look of those who surround the Emperor is commented upon, and leads to speculations. I shall not repeat them; but I must again record my sincere conviction that the Cabinets of the Tuileries and St. James are united on all questions, and that the Emperor's decisions will be found perfectly in accordance with the assertions he has made, viz.; that the peace shall be based upon such a treaty as will give Europe a secure and decided guarantee against the future aggression of Russia. Knowing the loyalty, frankness, and decision which has characterized the foreign policy of NAPOLEON III., we may be sure that, on this solemn occasion, the ruling mind, which has so happily directed the domestic and foreign affairs of France, will be found supporting the cause of Europe at the coming Congress. Those who entertain the slightest doubt on the subject, draw their conclusions and build their arguments on the imprudent regardings for peace displayed by the French press, and the language of those whose words have not that weight, perhaps, which their elevated positions ought to command. Had they shown that dignified reserve which belongs to the great man who rules France, much of this gossiping gossip, which emanates from the lips of the servants of the Palace, would not have received of its real value. It is asserted that France leans towards Austria and Prussia. Nothing can be more false. What has been the conduct of those two powers? The first has maintained a deceptive neutrality, and the second an ill-concealed hostility. The events of the war, and the appeal of the Emperor demanding Europe to declare "who is right and who is wrong," has brought them to seek for peace. The enemies of the alliance naturally seek to insinuate that France and England have diverging views about the terms of the Paris treaty. I repeat such speculations argue a knowledge of imprudent gossip rather than a just appreciation of the Emperor of the French. The envoys of France and England, obeying the inspirations of their respective Governments, will assume a firm attitude at the coming Congress; and if our enemies calculate on difficulties, they must turn to Russia and Austria to find them, and not to France and England, whose diplomacy moves side by side like those feets and armies which, if again called upon to exercise their might, will demand from Russia augmented sacrifices in proportion to their augmented victories.

Russia's Expectations in the Conference.

Vienna Correspondence of the Independence Belge.

Russia concedes the non-reconstruction of Bomarsund, but she desires the neutralization of the Isle of Heligoland, and wishes, in order to avoid their destruction, that the works on the north side of Sebastopol be considered as a land fort, the complete ruin of the south side of the city having removed all that affects its maritime character. As to Nicolaieff, Russia, it is said, does not expect that the suppression of this important dockyard (which can be devoted the more exclusively to merchant vessels, since it was at Sebastopol that the vessels heretofore were armed) will be insisted upon. Nicolaieff can no more be considered as belonging to the coast of the Black Sea than Rouen, in France, to that of the Ocean. Besides, the Consuls of the Maritime Powers would be able to insure a rigorous observance of the treaty.

ENGLAND.

British Ministerial View of the Anglo-American Difficulty—No Cause for War.

From the London Post.

The prospect of hostilities with America is not in itself serious; nor would so much be made of what there is if the public on both sides of the Atlantic would lay aside all petty anger and prejudice, and betake themselves to a calm and just review of the situation. Whatever feeling may at this moment exist between the two countries is due to misconception of the facts in some, and misrepresentation of them in others. There is no casus belli. There is nothing whatever that can for a moment justify two great Powers, like England and America, in having recourse to arms. Nations are bound by the same moral laws in respect of their quarrels as individuals. Many a cause for angry, and even menacing words may arise between two upright men, and yet nothing exist to justify them in proceeding to blows. Similarly, at the stage of civilization at which the nations of the West have now arrived, no cause of war can be admitted to be justifiable which does not stand upon a wrong committed or a right in danger, to such an extent as to leave no other means open for the vindication of the one or the defence of the other.

There is nothing in the American question which in the least answers these conditions. In the Russian aggression there was a tangible evil to which we could point as our justification for recourse to arms. We could point to a danger to universal liberty, to the peace of Europe, to the balance of power, to the faith of treaties, and to the honor of nations. But the attitude and temper of America are wholly without excuse. The case as between the two Governments is so ridiculously frivolous, that to suppose it possible to hang upon it an excuse for plunging into the wasting miseries of war is to assume Americans to be utterly void of all conscience of right, and all perception of their true interest. That they are not as a nation so void it is easy to believe; but it is also impossible not to see; that a people situated as they are, with a constitution so democratic in theory, so arbitrary in practice, without a preponderating conservative element, such as we possess in the House of Lords, or any principle of self-rectification, such as we have in the power of the Crown to dissolve Parliament—may without difficulty be lashed to madness by a few clever men, who find it their interest for the moment to stimulate popular passion and raise a cry for war.

The more the American question is examined, the more it will be seen to be purely a matter of feeling. American dignity is wounded. Apologies have been made for the wrong inadvertently done. Such an apology, at any other time, would have been instantly accepted, and all would have gone on as before. But new elections being in prospect, and President Pierce desiring a continuance of his chair, and those employed under him the greater part of whom would be displaced by his removal, desiring his continuance also, they find it convenient to get up a cry against England, and to magnify the alleged offence to proportions which it would be inconsistent with their home to tolerate, even after explanation, apology, and assurance of future circumspection. When this wicked attempt to create a quarrel was first made there was no prospect of France with Russia. In the Baltic a large fleet was ready to attack Sweaborg, Russian ports were blockaded with active preparation for the enterprise, and, such an armament as, in the whole history of nations, the world has never seen. About the same time it was the fashion to magnify the resources and invincibility of Russia, and a fabric thence the future embarrassment of Europe. Sebastopol, which was a good enough place for the purpose for which it was made, was represented as the strongest place in the world, and the Russian army as the most formidable. Our own military and naval preparations were represented as being on a scale of unprecedented magnitude, and the impression was sought to be created that we were involved in the East that we were throughout demonstrations and preparations in the West, that we were so propitious by taking upon our national pride; for conceding a little, promising little, testing and for embarrassing, if possible, home and military and commercial proceedings. Any such embarrassment would be so much gain to Russia, and was sure to receive the support, even if it were not actually the creation of the strong Russian party in the State of New-York, who have on many occasions taken opportunity to sow the seeds of ill-feeling towards England. Again it has been the policy of the pro-Russian Party in America to inculcate a popular belief in the brittle nature of the alliance between this country and France. Any one familiar with the most popular American papers is aware of this. The instigators of American irascibility doubtless drew a pretty picture of a rupture between the French and English Governments, of England compelled either to make a humiliating peace with Russia against the popular will, or else to carry it on without the aid of France, at a ruinous expenditure of men and money; and, putting all these circumstances together, conceived that we should be prepared to make any concessions, and consent to any terms demanded by the Government of the United States, rather than add to our troubles by provoking hostilities there also. But, alas! for these golden Yankee dreams! The French alliance was never stronger than at the present moment—the national self-respect was never higher—and, as if to make us strong beyond a shadow of doubt, there is a high probability that, in a very few months, we shall have a hundred thousand effective soldiers, a hundred ships of the line and frigates, and four hundred gun-boats, prepared to maintain the honor of England along the whole American seaboard, should that, unfortunately, turn out to be necessary.

Russia, by accepting the preliminary bases of peace, has given a totally new turn to affairs. This was not known to our American friends when the last dispatches left Washington. The tidings have reached them before this, and probably have done no little towards softening down the arrogant tone adopted a month ago. The attempt to precipitate that country into a war with England could not be more ill-timed for that country or more favorable for us than now. Our martial spirit is up, and we are more equal to a war with America than we have been at any time during this century. We have nothing, therefore, to fear.

But, with every means of going to war with that country, there is on the part of the English people a strong indisposition to do so. The people of England feel that the squabble is too contemptible. England can go to war for a principle, but not for a mere question of punctilio. Everyovert act in that direction must come from Washington. We shall wait quiescent, giving our hot brother time to cool and think a little. If then passion triumph over reason, and our forbearance be misconstrued, we shall know very well how to act.

American Dispute.

(From the Press, Disraeli's Paper.)

Self-respect is the safest preventive against quarrelling. The man who is sure of his own position is the slowest to suspect another of any design to question it; and hence the art of avoiding altercations has generally been deemed one of the peculiar characteristics of a gentleman. When Mr. BROUMMEL contradicted Major PEARSMAN on a point of fashionable gossip, how did the Major conduct himself? Did he endeavor to put down the impertinent blunderer? Did he even indulge in a sneer? Nothing of the kind. Few there present, we are told, could appreciate the melancholy politeness with which the veteran man of the world at once accepted Mr. BROUMMEL's version of the anecdote, which he perfectly well knew to be wrong, and admitted with readiness that his memory must have played him false. This is a stroke of true satire, in which, by insinuating the worthlessness of the point in dispute, we ridicule the littleness of those who first thought it worth disputing. Never to seem afraid of being put upon, as the phrase goes—never to argue a question merely lest people should think you can's argue it—never to fight simply for fear the lookers on should think you a coward—these are some of the maxims on which all men of superior minds act, habitually and unconsciously; and it is this habit which gives to such men that air of repose and self-possession before which fools stand abashed and dandies are wild with envy.

Few men can have mingled, even in the slightest degree, in society, without noticing that one prominent feature in the character of a gentleman is his readiness to take offence. His angles are sharper, his corns are "more tender," than those of other people. There is really no knowing where to be safe with him. The moment you put your finger on him his bristles stand out like a hedgehog's. The best plan of course is to leave such a character alone. But unfortunately where nations, not individuals, are concerned, this cannot be done. Cool contempt is out of the question, and the bristles must be laid by the application of the national sawder.

Puluris extinti facta compressa quiescent.

At least we hope so. But we must take the opportunity of observing, at the same time, how foolish it is not to be very careful of provoking this irritation. When gentlemen meet a parvenu in the world they are scrupulously ceremonious to him; just as Mr. DISRAELI tells us the old nobility of Spain made a point of addressing a new-made grandee by the whole string of his titles, whereas they generally accosted one another by some familiar abbreviation. Such should be our conduct towards America. We should do our best to avoid impinging on their ramified irritability. It is ceaseless to provoke a man, whoever he may be, who has the power to be mischievous. And the unpleasant results of having done so, which we not long ago predicted, are already becoming apparent. The reinforcement of the West India squadron has not been without its effect. The augmentation of the American navy is in rapid progress. Brother Jonathan may subject himself to deserved ridicule by his excessive sensibility, and ignorance of the code of courtesy which governs older countries. He may show himself a parvenu to any extent, but for all that he is no fool and he is no coward. The man who wants to fight you in the streets because you push against him, may be a low fellow, but that will be no consolation if you go home with a black eye. Neither will it much mend the matter if you give him two in return. On the whole you will consider it a very disagreeable business, and wish devoutly you had never got into it.

We recommend these remarks to the consideration of our Premier. He should reflect that we can get very little glory out of a war with America at the best, and may reap considerable loss and discredit. We had best keep on good terms with these touchy gentlemen. We have not the slightest reason to be angry with them, and we ought if possible not to allow them the pleasure of being angry with us.

Proceedings in Parliament.

The House of Lords has again had under discussion the question of the Wehleydale peerage, Lords LYNDHURST and DERBY, the leaders of the party who deny the right of life peers to sit or vote in Parliament, have obtained further time to search for precedents in support of their views. Lord LYNDHURST has given notice of a resolution that neither the patent to Sir J. PARKE, nor the writ of summons issued in pursuance of it, could entitle him to sit and vote in Parliament. Earl GRANVILLE stated that a steamer had been detached by the Government of India to suppress piracy in the Chinese waters. Earl GRANVILLE was not prepared to say when the papers relative to the fall of Kars could be laid before the House.

The Enlistment Affair in Parliament.

The London Press, of the 16th, which has the reputation of being the organ of DISRAELI, in alluding to the debate on the enlistment difficulty, says:

The discussion in the Commons last night, on the difference with America, produced an uneasy feeling, and was remarkable for the change in the tone and manner of Lord PALMERSTON, as contrasted with his address a week previously. Then he was spirited, sanguine, and confident in the goodness of his cause, and succeeded in carrying the House with him. Last night he was troubled and confused, and spoke with evident constraint. Mr. ROEBUCK showed that the dispute was really serious, and, so far as American documents could be relied on, he established a strong case against our authorities in America. The Government at Washington have demanded the recall of Mr. CRAMPTON and two of our Consuls. The correspondence between the two Governments is proceeding, but there seems reason to apprehend that a diplomatic rupture will take place. Mr. DISRAELI spoke on the question with reserve, and helped the Government out of its difficulty by recommending Mr ROEBUCK to withdraw his motion for papers. It is singular to remark how exactly the predictions made when the Foreign Enlistment Bill was urged through the Legislature, more than a year ago, have been fulfilled by the results. One of the strongest objections to it was, that it would tend to embroil us with neutral States. The objection was overborne, and the caution it should have suggested was disregarded. The Foreign Legion has up to this time been not of the slightest service to us, though it has involved us in a serious difficulty with America, and has unfortunately placed us primarily in the wrong.

A Fugitive Slave in Liverpool.

Ship Asterion, Captain GAY, from New-Orleans, arrived at Liverpool on the 16th. On overhauling the ship the customs searchers found a mulatto girl concealed in the boatswain's bunk, where she had been secreted during the voyage, unknown to any one on board, excepting the boatswain. A reward of $500 was offered at New-Orleans for the girl's apprehension. She is now at Liverpool.

[illegible] Q—Do you know what Commissioners were there? A—[illegible] seeing Capt. Sanders and Maj. [illegible], who acted as counsel for the commission.

Q—Do you know of any meetings at the Astor House? A—I have heard of them; I was not present.

Q—Were you in Albany in the Winter of 1854, when the immigrant bill passed? A—I was there.

Q—Do you know what Commissioners were there? A—I saw Commissioner Cooper.

Q—Do you know what place at these meetings? It was a question as to the propriety of using Castle Garden as a landing depot, and the best mode of carrying it out.

Q—Do you know that the Commissioners charge for your most men you charge on your line? A—The Commissioners do not take the charge, but the people at the Garden do. The railroad does not make a transfer and allow the Garden. I do not know what they charge at Castle Garden, as I do not receive money there.

Q—Have you any acquaintance with the manner in which business is done in Castle Garden? A—I did know at the commencement.

Q—(By Counsellman Cooper.)—Do you know whether the emigrant is better protected at Castle Garden than what they were landed promiscuously about New-York? A—I certainly do.

Some discussion here arose between the Chairman and Counsellman Cooper as to the propriety of this question, as they only met to investigate the present system, Cooper insisting that it was the duty of the Committee to find out the truth, and repeated the question in the following form:

Q—Are you well acquainted with the forwarding business? A—I have been in it thirty years.

Q—Are you aware of your own knowledge whether the emigrant is better protected than he would be out of it? A—Of my own knowledge I can say that facilities and advantages are afforded them there which they never could secure out of it.

Q—To whom is this 20 per cent. paid? A—I do not know; it is retained in the Garden.

Q—Has the reporter's line at any time an office in Castle Garden? A—No.

Q—Where were the tickets sold? A—By the people through the Bank Continental.

Q—Would you have an office there next Summer if the business was carried on there as formerly? A—I think so, in anticipation.

Q—Do the passengers lose by this 20 per cent.? A—[illegible]

Q—[illegible] Wood anything to do with Castle Garden? A—I do not know whether he has any [illegible], but I saw him with some of the Commissioners of Emigration; I have met him at several meetings at the Astor House.

Q—Was the raising of the fare taken place by railroad agents before the opening of Castle Garden? A—[illegible] dollar from New-York to Albany. The tickets for three two routes are sold [illegible]

The witness stated, upon the close of his evidence, that he was sure that he had not, nor expects to have any interest in the Castle Garden organization. Mr. [illegible] said that without such an establishment as Castle Garden it was out of the power of any public to protect the emigrant, as an amount of robbery, pillage and villainy towards the emigrant takes place for opening beyond endurance. He also said that within the space of ten days, a few days ago, he had seen emigrants to be robbed to the amount of $100 each. He would rather have his [illegible] than be a participant in the robbery of the emigrant. The Garden was open, and he thought it improper.

[illegible] being duly sworn, testified: I am a [illegible] Commissioner in Castle Garden; he [illegible] Commissioner I know of cases where persons applied for tickets at Castle Garden, and [illegible] money; one of the cases was that of a man who [illegible] a passage to Cincinnati for less than [illegible] afterwards got him a passage at Mr. New-[illegible] the regular fare is $7; I was about four months in Castle Garden, and left because I got tired of it; I think there is no difference between the protection afforded the emigrant at Castle Garden and that afforded at their landing at other places; I know of one instance where an emigrant complained of having been robbed of a number of guns at Castle Garden. There was no misunderstanding between the Commissioners and myself when I left Castle Garden; I was four years in the employ of Mr. Newton; I never knew an emigrant to be robbed on his dock; I have known passengers to come direct from the ship, and be sent by his line without delay; passengers who do not travel into the city are allowed to go in and out for a week; there is a man named Robert Walker who is allowed to go into Castle Garden to solicit passengers for the Western homes; I do not know whether he has that privilege; there is a refreshment stand in Castle Garden; the prices they charge at Castle Garden are those established by the Commissioners; the rents are paid by Mr. Conklin, who is the [illegible]; I do not remember having seen any sick persons there; there was one Commissioner (Mr. Kennedy) usually there; he was there when I got there in the morning at seven, and he was there when I left at six in the evening; I have seen small-[illegible] placed at the bread stand, which they generally allowed $1 12; the practice was also carried on by the Cashier's office, but more extensively as regards half-crowns, shillings and [illegible]; those who have no money are turned out of Castle Garden at the expiration of a week; they are allowed to stay the week; they invariably leave the Garden; the transportation of [illegible] the Commissioners; I have [illegible] at several meetings at the Astor House; I was not called upon by a man named [illegible] to assist him in collecting money; I was not [illegible] to do it; it is intimation [illegible] Castle Garden particularly Murray, that the emigrants submit to the robbery; I was ordered to pass through; I knew [illegible] William Nelson to be kept in the street, with the passengers on board, without food, fire or [illegible] days and nights, when the passengers of other ships that arrived later, but had more [illegible], were discharged; the passengers were on the benches; they are not allowed to sleep; the only person allowed to remove the luggage in Castle Garden is William Conklin, who is [illegible] the Commissioners; I have seen the Commissioners and I have [illegible] I never had a high opinion of them, because I do not consider him adequate to perform the duties he undertakes; I have seen the emigrant's baggage to be locked up on the dock, and they not be able to get near it till the following Monday, either to procure money, or a change of clothes; I do not think it is much the fault of the Commissioners as the [illegible]; I know of instances where passengers were robbed of parts of their effects; in one case of a man who had three dozen of [illegible] stolen from him; I have known persons [illegible] to be kept in the Garden for three days; I have seen a man who was just after [illegible] to Cincinnati; the man had sat down [illegible] and said he was [illegible] to Cincinnati; I have seen persons [illegible] Friday morning.

[illegible] Church Commissioners—Value of the Property.

The controversy in regard to the value of the property held by the Corporation of Trinity Church is thus very, since has been for a long time carried on between Rev. Dr. Berrian, the Rector of Trinity, on the one side, and on the other by the authors of the Protestant Churchman, Revs. Drs. Tyng, Arthur, and Cleveland, have been recently enlivened off from its old and long beaten track, and the prominent appearance of the indefatigable rector is now Judge Willard. Dr. Berrian's pamphlet, entitled "Plain Facts," in which he makes a statement of the value of all the property which now yields an income to the Corporation, has called forth a long reply, in which, by assumed facts, a great [illegible] from the Church property is not only [illegible]

[illegible] Congress from Mississippi, has declined the appointment of Consul at Havana. The nomination was sent to the Senate and confirmed a month ago. It was understood to have received the sanction of the nominee, whose ill-health it was represented required a change of climate. Whether the interests of the mission, or private causes have intervened, Mr. GREENWOOD has, after all, added himself to that long roll of gentlemen, who, with the same honor tendered them, have preferred to stay at home. It is supposed that the Havana Consulship has now been offered to every white male of adult years in the State of Mississippi; and that it will have to stand over until the rising generation of that Commonwealth attain majority. In the course of three years it has been declined by a half-dozen Judges, Congressmen, and Militia Colonels—personal friends of Hon. JEFF. DAVIS—not one of whom seems to appreciate that snug bit of Government patronage. The defect is nevertheless in the market rather than in the article. Although its revenue has been greatly curtailed by the recent Consular Reform bill, the Consulate will still yield the incumbent a net income of $2,500 a year, which, with strict economy, may be made to cover the cost of housekeeping even in that costliest of cities.

Fortunately, in the person of the acting Consul, Mr. WM. H. ROBERTSON, the country has the best representative it could employ there; familiar with the language, habits, and national character of the people, and abundantly conversant with the politics of the island, Mr. ROBERTSON has conducted the office through four or five years of fillibusterism, ill-feeling, and jealousy, with a tact and discretion indispensable at a period so critical; has vindicated with uniform firmness and success the rights of American citizens invoking his protection; and acquired by his dignified self-respect, frankness, courtesy, the respect and friendship of the insular officials, as well as of the throng of Americans frequenting Havana in the Winter. Mr. ROBERTSON has, in fact, shown every qualification for his position, save political service to the Administration, which long residence abroad has prevented, had he been otherwise disposed to yield it. He has, therefore, no chance of elevation to the full honors of the Consulate; he can only keep the berth warm until some desperate individual is ready to displace him.

Shall we Arbitrate or Fight!

A series of most astonishing blunders, that bear the appearance in certain instances, which we need not here particularize, of intentional deception, in the diplomatic negotiations between our Government and that of England, in relation to the Central American question, has placed us in an unfavorable light before the eyes of Europe.

Lord CLARENDON, in the Peers, and Lord PALMERSTON, in the Commons, have silenced a lively opposition by asserting that a tender of amicable arrangement by means of arbitration had been submitted to our Government, and had met with no response. The effect of such a statement was inevitable. It convicted us of an implacable anxiety for war; a quarrelsome disposition to decline any peaceful accommodation; a resolution to stand uncompromisingly to the very letter of its bond. It is difficult to over-estimate the prejudice such a statement must inflict upon us in the public opinion of the world. It is between nations as among individuals; he who prefers to plunge at once into a lawsuit, rather than submit the issue to the opinions of unbiased referees, exposes his cause to serious suspicions of weakness. We cannot afford to embark in a contest with this censure affixed to us. No Government can afford to defy the sense of mankind. Hence in each of the wars we have entered upon a due regard to the opinions of other nations has required a declaration of the case upon which we act, with a defence of the motives. That despotic Governments are subjected to the same law has been evinced by the anxiety of Russia to justify every step of her progress throughout the war now closing. The Government of England has therefore placed ours in a false position; it has secured the attitude, always coveted in such cases, of defence. It has the vantage ground of having made an apology, (which was never made,) and an offer of accommodation, (which was never tendered,) and of being nevertheless thrust into the control.

What then is the policy of the United States? We think there can be no hesitation about it. These announcements of offered abitrament on the part of England, and the allegation that we have not yet responded, certainly leave us the option of accepting or declining such a solution. On duly considering the subject we think the offer should be accepted,—not because the decision of the case is likely to be favorable; though we are by no means sure that either France or Russia is not sufficiently disinterested to make an equitable award,—not because we are friendly to such references, or that we can recall a single instance where they have been acquiesced in by the contestants. The experience we formerly had, in the award of the King of the Netherlands in regard to the Northeastern boundary, instructs us as to the futility of all such palliatives. But we must have the approbation of public opinion in our favor. Considering the strong monarchical prejudices uniformly against us, we cannot dispense with the strongest possible case. And that power, at this day of the world, when war grows daily more and more difficult of excuse, which insists upon an appeal to arms, before it has exhausted every means tending to a pacific accommodation—before it has pursued and finally satisfied itself of the unreality of the manifest phenomena of peace, called up by juggling diplomatists—before the exhibition of the largest patience, forbearance, and anxiety to conciliate,—that Power surrenders to its antagonist all the indispensable sympathy and support afforded by universal public opinion. We were too young at the era of the Revolution to do without this aid; it was invoked, and insured us success. We are too young still to match war against the united force of the race. And we cannot bear in mind the alternative, or rather the dilemma, presented to this Government, lies between arbitration, or war, or peace without arbitration. War, with or without arbitration, the American people are not prepared for. And the very tocsin of absurdity would be reached if, declining a reference to any umpire, we sit down, wrapping our wrongs about us, hugging them to our breast, and refusing to adjust them in either of the only ways known to nations—the sword, or the award of equity.

Conceding, however, that war is inevitable—that any arbitrament, if submitted to, must eventuate in that—still, reason and expediency plead for the arbitration. The most creditable line of argument does not, perhaps, lie in the circumstance that we are unprepared for a conflict with England, and that any delay, however secured, is of the utmost moment. Such is, however, the honest fact. The reference may enable us to dispense with a warlike vindication of our rights. It will certainly enable us to provide for it. And, while the friends of peace may fairly hope that whatever belligerent heat exists will cool down and disappear in the interval of reflection thus secured, the advocates of war will admit that the period may be most profitably employed in arming for the conflict, to which an adverse decision might possibly give place. A notice of intention to expel the English from Central America has been advocated in the Senate. A submission to arbitrament must answer all the ends of such notice, would afford time for preparation, would set us right in the favor of the world. We are at a loss to conceive on what reasonable ground it can be declined. There is a candidly avowed disinclination to a rupture of our present relations, on the part of England, and we ought to have, on our part, a sufficient confidence in the justice of our claims, and the power to enforce them, to be able to act with that degree of magnanimous forbearance which is the characteristic of conscious strength.

The Premier Duke of England.

There was nothing either in the personal or political qualities of the Duke of NORFOLK, of whose death we have account by this mail, to challenge consideration. For many years his chief title to distinction was his being the Premier and only Roman Catholic Duke, as was the Premier Earl of England, Lord SHREWSBURY, also of the old creed. The Duke, however, parted with this solitary feather in his plume some few years since in affront at the celebrated Bull with which Cardinal WISEMAN invaded England. His life, indeed, was passed in most harmless exploits. One of his ancestors, so far back as 1843, the one upon whose gate before the battle of Bosworth was set the celebrated distich,

"Jockey of Norfolk, be not too bold,"

was created Earl Marshall of England, with power to bear in the King's presence a golden staff tipped at each end with black, the upper part adorned with the royal arms, and the lower with those of his own family, for which arduous duty he was to receive £20 a-year. This precious privilege he bequeathed to his descendants. For some years the late Duke was equal to the task, and maintained sufficiently respectably the unsullied fame of his ancestors in carrying gold sticks. But, unfortunately, some short time since, one evening after dinner at Windsor, he exhibited a slight uneasiness of motion, the result of a too pleasant potation, to which gold sticks like other sticks, will sometimes give way, and Queen VICTORIA, who maintains a steadiness of deportment worthy of her good grandmother CHARLOTTE, dismissed the Duke for this accidental gayety, and deprived him of his mastership of horse. The subject created much merriment and some mention in the Times. The only other occasion on which he rose above the usual dull, dead surface of his order, was almost equally unfortunate. Beef and beer are held by all Englishmen as institutions, and they are preculiarly chary of their being touched. On occasion of an agricultural dinner, however, in Sussex some years since, the Duke undertook to promulgate the heresy that there was another diet far cheaper and almost as nutritious, and boldly exclaimed, that no English man need go to bed grumbling, as long as he had a basin of hot water with a nation of Curry powder sprinkled through. We need hardly say that this recommendation was received over England with indignant shouts of "Try it yourself," and the Duke was, by popular will, declared entitled to add to his many other titles, that of "Curry Norfolk," under which name he has been since in all places and many pantomimes known.

The secession of the Duke to the ranks of Protestantism, during the Roman invasion excitement of '49, was regarded as a heavy blow and great discouragement by the English Roman Catholics, who conceived that all disasters would follow, according to superstitious legends in old Catholic houses, on the departure of one of the NORFOLKS from the ancient faith. But the Duke's conversion, like many or those in the days of HENRY and ELIZABETH, was more the result of political feeling than strong faith, and of personal anger at the active part taken by his son in sustaining the arrogant pretensions of the Church of Rome. But the late was not the only Duke of NORFOLK who abjured. His grandfather, of whose wandering round the Brighton Pavilion THACKERAY in his lectures has so pleasantly told, took the Protestant oaths to obtain the privilege of sitting in the House of Lords. However, whatever may have been the shortcomings of the father towards Catholicity is sure to be more than compensated for in the fanatical devotion of his son, who unites to a singular sweetness and goodness of nature, a most bigoted surrender of every feeling and faculty to the interest of the Church.

The late Duke was married to the sister of the Duke of SUTHERLAND, BYRON's second love, of whom he speaks in his letters "as so beautiful and shy." The present Duke is married to the daughter of Sir BERTRAM LYONS, who won such laurels in the East. She has become a convert to her husband's faith.

THE AMERICAN BOARD.

The Subject of Missions under Separate Consideration.

Special Correspondence of the N. Y. Daily Times.

ALBANY, Tuesday, March 4, 1856.

The American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions—known, in brief, as the A. B. C. F. M.—has its troubles, like other Societies and other people. And like them, too, it meets occasionally to ask counsel of its brethren. A lively time is in prospect here, and the signs of the times indicate that if, in the multitude of counsellors there is safety, there is also likely to be great diversity of opinion in regard to the question that has brought the A. B. C. F. M.'s together, and that the clash of counter-interests will place the body in imminent hazard of producing a spectacle of brotherly counsel which is not precisely synonymous with brotherly unity and harmony. However, there is something always to be gained by the application of remedies that accelerate the circulation. A brisk medicine purifies the body from foul humors, and where the disease is deep-seated and has been long troublesome, no matter how harsh the remedy, provided it performs its work efficiently. In that case, the man is doubly strong, and his spirits doubly equable.

The questions which are immediately in dispute, and the discussion, or possibly the settlement of which will be the business of the special meeting of the American Board called for this meeting, touch the whole subject of Foreign Missions. It is to be decided, in the first place, whether the American system of evangelising heathen lands will be rendered more effective by the adoption of a plan of early school education, or by itinerant oral preaching. Second, there grows out of this one question or multitude of smaller ones—such as the utility of teaching the natives of India the English tongue; whether the native helpers should be elevated to a prominent rank; whether houses for preaching should be provided; whether the Press is an agent to be developed, and whether the various fields of missionary labor in the East should be cultivated more carefully and zealously than they have been; or whether in view of the changes in popular sentiment among the heathens themselves, and in consideration of their increasing desire to attain a knowledge of the English language as a means of increasing their worldly possessions, and putting them all comfortably in the road to wealth, whether the school system now pursued should not be forsaken, and preaching at large through the country be resorted to. And thirdly, out of this last question grows another, which is nothing more nor less than a question of veracity; and this trouble has grown out of the following circumstances:

A Deputation was sent out to India, in August, 1854, by the authority of the American Board, for the purpose of examining into all the points which have been at issue. This deputation consisted of Rev. Dr. ANDERSON, Senior Secretary of the Board, and Rev. AUGUSTUS C. THOMPSON, of Roxbury, Massachusetts. These gentlemen went to India viâ England, explored, examined, instituted comparisons, held conventions in the Indies, and returned to this country six weeks since; bringing their sheaves with them, with specimens of the grapes of the land. Their report is what calls this body together here in Albany, on this memorable anniversary of Inaugurations. The Board, it is supposed, will endeavor to signalize the occasion by the inauguration of a composite system that shall meet the views of all, and offend the prejudices of none.

In short, there is to be a general overhauling of all the acts of the Prudential Committee of the Board. And the question of veracity comes in just here: Did, or did not the Prudential Committee empower their delegates to act as well as counsel? It is this point that gives trouble. Did the delegates order the Mission Schools to be closed as a consequence of their visit,—or did the delegates do nothing except advise and counsel? There is no present answer to these queries; and it may be distasteful to have anything said about them. Still, such things are talked of.

The sessions begin this evening at Dr. PALMER's Church, and will continue till the subjects in dispute are settled in one way or another; a week which will occupy two or three days at least.

CITY POLITICS.

There was a very respectable meeting of the residents of the Eighteenth Ward, who are in favor of the election of MILLARD FILLMORE to the Presidency, and ANDREW JACKSON DONELSON to the Vice-Presidency, at the Demilt Dispensary, last evening. The Committee of Arrangements were fortunate in being able to secure an appropriate place for the meeting. The Dispensary, as our readers may have heard, and as the name implies, is a receptacle for those who are sickly, whose present and prospective condition entitles them to the commiseration and aid of the healthy and the benevolent. In such an institution, above all others, the Committee of Arrangements considered it desirable that that portion of the great American Party who talk of the possibility of electing Messrs. FILLMORE and DONELSON, should meet, and there they did meet. There were full thirty persons present—a very select and respectable party, and they had a very nice and quiet time. The American Party has heretofore been much spoken against because of its proscription and secrecy. It is not by injunction, proscriptive or secret, now. Since the adjournment of the National Nominating Convention, the doors of the American Party have been thrown open to all; and since the publication of the nominations made by that Convention, there has been no need of locking them, for they are still as private and select as the silliest Know-Nothing could desire.

Hon. JAMES BROOKS, who was the principal physician present last evening, fearing that such would continue to be the case, urged the most zealous of the party to venture out, (as soon as the weather and the condition of the streets should render it consistent with a Democrat for themselves to do so,) and spread their cage to the people, and ask the well-disposed to come in and help them. This suggestion was received with furor, and then he proceeded to tell them just what they should say to the people in order to secure their aid. They were not to tell them that the American Party does not make war against foreigners; that they welcomed them to our shores; and then to inform them that foreigners are not capable of self-government, and consequently totally unfit to take any part in the Government under which they live; that they did not war against the Roman Catholic religion, but denounced the Pope and all who obey his commands; and that they as a party had not sufficient confidence in their wives and daughters to trust an unmarried Priest with them, in a private room, for more than an hour at a time. At least he declared his unwillingness to submit those dear to him to such a test. Returning to the subject of labor and its interests, he stated that he was willing foreigners should be admitted to our work-shops on an equality with other mechanics, and that he was willing to share the profits of labor with them—a statement which gave comfort to a reporter in his employ, who soon after was seen to smile. In conclusion, he called upon them to stand by MILLARD FILLMORE as the signer of the Fugitive Slave law, and by ANDREW JACKSON DONELSON as a lover of the peculiar institution, and the owner of a hundred slaves.

The meeting adjourned soon afterwards.

YOUNG MEN'S KOSSUTH GENERAL COMMITTEE.

A regular meeting of this Committee was held at Tammany Hall last evening. DOUGLAS TAYLOR, Vice Chairman, presided. The only business done was the ordering of an election on the first Tuesday of next month for Chairman of the Committee, in place of SOLOMON H. NORRIS, who has gone to join the forces of Gen. WALKER in Nicaragua.

THE STATE OF THE SHIPBUILDING TRADE.

The Herrick wing of the Softs of the Nineteenth Ward held a meeting at Dwyer's Fire-Mile House, last evening, "for the formation of an effective organization," and to protest against the rule of the Softs delegates admitted to the Tammany Hall General Committee, as the representatives of that Ward, in defiance of the expressed voice of the people.

Mayor WOOD advertises for proposals to remove the dirt, ice and snow from Broadway, between the Astor House and Union-square, the whole to be done between 6 P. M. and 6 A. M., and completed by the 15th inst. The stuff is to be dumped "into the Battery Embankment," "or the Park." What is wanted of it in the Park? But the proposals are welcome. We see the dawn of a decent day again for Broadway.

NEW-YORK CITY.

NEW-YORK MEDICAL COLLEGE.

ANNUAL COMMENCEMENT.

The commencement exercises of the New-York Medical College, Thirteenth-street, took place last night. The lecture-room was filled to its utmost capacity by a mixed assemblage, comprising a large number of ladies. Dodworth's band supplied one of the most admirable features of the occasion, in the shape of a selection of popular airs admirably performed.

The College faculty, accompanied by some members of the Boards of Trustees and of Censors, entered at about a quarter to 8 o'clock. Mr. PETER COOPER announced that Rev. Dr. GUMMS would preface the proceedings of the evening with prayer.

At the conclusion of the prayer,

Mr. PETER COOPER again rose, and after a very sensible address on the duties, responsibilities and honors of the medical profession, introduced

Dr. CORNELIUS WALKER, who presented the report of the Committee on Thesis. A recent graduate of this institution, he said, Dr. GERARD VAN ARDEN, donated a certain sum of money to be awarded to the author of the best thesis submitted for the degree of Doctor of Medicine, at the annual Commencement in 1856. It was deemed advisable to divide the donation into two prizes; the first of these was awarded to Dr. EDWARD M. DEAY, of New-York, for a thesis on Epilepsy, and the second to Mr. BENJAMIN LEE, of Delaware, for a thesis on the Mechanics of Medicine.

Dr. R. OGDEN DOREMUS then read a list of the graduates, which we subjoin:

James P. Cooper, Alabama; Levi Warner, New-York; F. C. Olavarieta, Cuba; Augustin Orihuela, Cuba; T. S. De Castro, Cuba; Gerard Van Arsdale, Central America; William N. Hardin, M. D., Virginia; Edward M. Deay, New-York; George T. Dougherty, Mississippi; H. Gilbert Leigh, Virginia; John Grammer, Jr., Virginia; John J. Lenox, New-York; Warburton Hill, North Carolina; John Carey Selden, Virginia; Manuel Romagosa, Cuba; Ralph W. Cummings, Maine; William S. Howell, New-York; A. B. Foster, Maine; James W. Greene, M. D., Virginia; Geo. H. Perry, Rhode Island; Chas. J. O'Hagan, North Carolina; J. Henry Johnson, Rhode Island; E. H. Harris, Iowa; J. C. Kenny, New-York; Samuel E. Elliott, New-York; Adam Bossman, New-York; Benj. Lee, Delaware; C. K. S. Millard, M. D., Kentucky; R. L. Budd, M. D., New-York; Wm. E. Cassidy, M. D., Kentucky; Geo. B. Boston, M. D., Connecticut; Wm. C. Williams, M. D., Missouri.

HONORARY DEGREES.—Abraham Robertson, M. D., New-Hampshire; Daniel Tilden, M. D., Ohio; Arthur Du Bois, New-York.

Dr. HORACE W. GERMS, the President, on behalf of the Faculty and Trustees of the Institution, made a very pertinent and admirable address to the graduates, after which he administered the medical pledge required by the faculty, and conferred the degrees.

Dr. DAVID MEREDITH REESE then rose amid applause, and proceeded to deliver the valedictory address. His discourse was eminently practical, and characterized both by strength of material and eloquence of expression. His strictures upon the croakers who are continually deploring the degeneracy of the profession elicited frequent laughter and applause. Were these lugubrious critics, he asked, among the best read, best taught, and best qualified of their peers? To ask this question was to answer it. It would be safe to predict of all such croakers not merely inferiority in their early training, but mediocrity as their utmost attainment. In spite of all that might be said about the retrogression of medical science, there could be no doubt that it was advancing pari passu with the enlightened progress of civilization and the light of Christianity.

The Central Park—How it looks Now.

New-York may be classified into three great divisions, Upper-Ten-dom, Leather-dom, and Shanty-dom. The Fifth-avenue represents the first district, the Bowery the second, and the upper part of the island generally the last. Alas! what contrasts life presents of human misery, poverty, and degradation on the one hand, and luxury and extravagance on the other! Where now between Sixtieth and One-hundred and sixth streets the former may be seen in their lowest and blackest depths, the latter a few years hence will flaunt out in gay magnificence and elegant equipages, when the Central Park shall rival the Champs Elysées of Paris and the Corso of Rome. The 700 acres of land which are destined to be the pride and delight of the citizens, "if we only fence them in," are now inhabited principally by Irish families, who dwell in specimens of architecture so rickety in their disregard of rectilinear proportions, that they might make one tremble with apprehension for their inmates; but all the hovels of the latter, we are pretty certain, could not produce a tremble in the pleasers by. These little one-storied shanties are each inhabited by four or five persons, not including the pig and the goats; and indeed it would be a difficult task to distinguish the genus to which they severally belonged, so identified are they in the filth which is the garb alike of all.

The site of the new Park was selected by Aldermen DODGE, one of the Committee on behalf of the Board of Aldermen, (appointed after a bill recommending the selection of Jones' Woods for the same object had already passed the Legislature,) to ascertain whether a more eligible location could not be procured for the purposes of the proposed improvement. In accordance with the suggestions contained in his report, the original bill was rescinded, and the present one substituted. There can be no doubt of the wisdom of choosing the grounds which have been finally set apart for the Park, in preference to any that could be obtained elsewhere on the island. The scenery is in some portions exceedingly bold and majestic; the inequalities of surface at different points vary by as much as two hundred feet; the Croton reservoir will be an ornamental feature in the landscape; and when the Commissioners—who, we hope, will be speedily appointed—shall have laid out an immense Park, with serpentine roads winding along the sides of the hills, and overhanging by some placid lake ravined and very respectable precipice, with a new and ever-changing view at every turn; when they shall have planted and transplanted take the soil from old trees of every variety; when they shall have created artificial lakes, and cascades, and fountains, all composed of water supplied from the rushing springs of Croton River; when all the resources of art, assisted by nature, shall have been applied in making this spot an oasis in the desert of brick and mortar that will very shortly surround it on every side,—then our citizens will honor and gratefully acknowledge the enterprise which has projected, and the energy which, as we trust, will have successfully prosecuted, this noble and vast undertaking. It is a particular source of pride with those who have grown to be old men among us, that they are able to look back to the day when the whole of New-York was bounded on the north by Wall-street. They have beheld the growth and improvements of their native City with joy and gratification. We would advise all our young men to pay a visit to the grounds of the Central Park before their metamorphosis begins. It will be to them hereafter a pleasurable reminiscence of their younger days, when they shall resort to these haunts of the gay and of the poor alike, to breathe fresh air and enjoy the scenery in common—that this paradise was once a barren waste, and that the fairy who has produced so much of beauty and elegance where all before was desolate, is the genius of our free institutions encouraging the industry and inducing the prosperity of their fellow-countrymen.

The Special Committee of the Aldermen appointed to investigate the charges brought against the Sixth-avenue Railroad Company, of neglecting the streets through which the road passes, by piling up the snow on either side of it, met yesterday, at 3 P. M. There was a large attendance present. Messrs. John Creighton, Edward Barlow, Commissioner Marsh and Samuel Hoppes, James D. Allen, Charles Lyell, Stephen Tyson and John Hays stated that they were suffering loss in their business by the huge accumulations of snow and ice thrown by the Railroad in front of their stores. Mr. OLIVER CHARLOCK, the President of the Road, alleged that the Company had carted away more than was thrown in the streets outside their rails. He also stated that the Police Captains of the Ninth, Sixteenth, Twentieth and Twenty-second Wards were empowered to employ men in their respective districts to remove the snow, and that over one hundred men had been thus employed. The complaining parties insisted that they had seen men with spades and shovels, and evidence that neither spade nor shovel had been done to clear the snow piled up in the side of the track. The Chairman announced that the Police Captains referred to would be notified to appear before the Committee. Adjourned to Thursday afternoon.

A CASE OF PARIS HATS FOR GENTLEMEN JUST received by GEO. W. ...

Dr. Chemical Lectures in Brooklyn, by Mrs. Stevenson.

DEAR SIR: A number of your friends desire to see some branch of your favorite science illustrated by experiment, and I have ventured to suggest to Mrs. Stevenson the propriety of giving a few lectures, if she could be induced to do so. I know of no one who can more fully and satisfactorily do the subject justice than Mrs. Stevenson, and I hope that the young men will be numerous enough to induce her to make a stay in this city.
Rev. Geo. W. Bethune, D.D.
Rev. A. H. Morton, D.D.
Rev. Francis Vinton, D.D.
Rev. Henry Ward Beecher.
Rev. Joseph Parrish, D.D.
Rev. Thos. Armitage, D.D.
Rev. Thos. Ewer, D.D.
Rev. Geo. W. Bethune, D.D.—Dear Sir: I cannot but think that the course of lectures on Chemistry, by Mrs. Stevenson, would be very valuable to the young men of Brooklyn. I shall be happy to do all in my power to promote your wishes in this matter. Yours, &c.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

The popularity of Mr. Fillmore seems to increase as he approaches closer towards the goal which his friends "Darkey." They not unlikely, in the phrase we hear in a minstrel song, "while we stay from the present." Thus it was Mr. Smooth was a "Yankee" and born in Cape Cod,
Who accosted a "roving commissioner" abroad;
His hair was wax like, if you're anxious to know,
To look sharp after Soule, Gordon Sawyers & Co.

With his coat-tails tucked up and his collar turned down,
He roamed o'er creation from City to town,
And proclaimed "Young America" doctrine abroad,
With the language and lungs of a "b'hoy" from Cape Cod!

And the "docents of Europe" grew pale with affright
When Soule, Gordon Sawyers & Smooth here in sight;
And the "knowing ones" winked and the "old fogies" mooned
When the "Manifest-Destiny-Trio" appeared!

If you're weary of "humcombe" and anxious to know
The secrets of Pierce, Marcy, Forney & Co.;
If you'd like to hear plain Democratical truth,
You can hear it well told by "our Cousin Sol. Smooth."

"Tis a book that you grin at from opening to end,
Where wisdom and wit most harmoniously blend;
"Tis a pleasure to age and a lesson to youth,
To read the adventures of Solomon Smooth!

BIOGRAPHY OF MILLARD FILLMORE.
In press, and will shortly be published,
A BIOGRAPHY OF HON. M. FILLMORE.
It is well known to many of the intimate friends of the present nominee of the American Party for the Presidency that, at their suggestion, something over a year since, Hon. THOMAS M. FOOTE commenced a Biography; his long personal and political intimacy with Mr. FILLMORE, added to the fact of his having occupied the chair editorial of the Commercial Advertiser, during a great part of that time, rendered him peculiarly capable of doing justice to the subject. In pursuance of this wish, so expressed, Mr. FOOTE had made considerable progress in the collection of memoranda and preparation of the work, when he concluded to embark upon his present tour to Europe. His matter thus prepared was left in our hands, and we have now the satisfaction of announcing that Mr. I. CHAMBERLAIN, who has for the past two years acted as both associate and principal editor of the Commercial Advertiser, has consented to finish up the work, in consequence of a wish so expressed by Dr. FOOTE, previous to his departure.
The Biography of Hon. M. FILLMORE will shortly be issued in a duodecimo of upwards of 200 pages, embellished with a portrait; and for extensive circulation, will be neatly got up in paper covers, and offered at the low price of $12 per 100 copies, or $100 per 1,000 copies, cash.
Orders from the Trade, or from Councils, inclosing cash, will be promptly attended to, and furnished in the order in which they may be received.

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE, COMPTROLLER'S OFFICE, CITY OF NEW-YORK, Feb. 20, 1866.

CENTRAL PARK FUND STOCK.—$2,500,000 AT FIVE PER CENT., REDEEMABLE IN FORTY-TWO YEARS. $1,000,000 AT SIX PER CENT., REDEEMABLE IN THREE YEARS.—Sealed proposals will be received at the Comptroller's Office until Monday, April 7, 1866, at 2 o'clock P. M., when the same will be publicly opened, for the whole or any part of the amount of two million eight hundred thousand dollars of Central Park Fund Stock, of the City of New-York, authorized by an act of the Legislature of this State, entitled "An Act to alter the Map of the City of New-York, by laying out thereon a Public Place, and to authorize the taking of the same," passed July 21, 1853; and by an ordinance of the Common Council of said City, approved by the Mayor, February 20, 1856.

The said Stock will consist of twenty-eight thousand shares, of one hundred dollars each share, bearing interest at the rate of five per cent. per annum, payable quarter-yearly, and the principle redeemable on the first day of July, 1906.

Sealed proposals will also be received and opened, at the same time and place, for a loan of one million six hundred thousand dollars, for which certificates will be issued, to be called "The Central Park Assessment Fund," consisting of sixteen thousand shares of one hundred dollars each, in pursuance of the one hundred and ninetieth section of the act entitled "An Act to reduce several laws relating particularly to the City of New-York; into one act," passed April 9, 1813; and an ordinance of the Common Council, passed February 20, 1865, which stock will bear interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum, payable half-yearly, and the principal redeemable on the fifth day of February, 1869.

The proposals will state the number of shares desired, and the price per share; the persons whose proposals are accepted will be required to deposit with the Chamberlain of the City the sum awarded and covered by the bid, and on presenting the receipt of the Chamberlain to the Comptroller, will be entitled to receive a certificate for the par value of the number of shares carrying interest from the date of the deposit.

Those persons who have awards due them on the Central Park, if they offer terms more favorable to the interests of the City than those who make cash bids, can receive certificates of stock for the amount of their awards immediately after the bids are decided on, carrying interest from the date of the confirmation of the awards. In case the same person or property is assessed, the person claiming the award will be required to pay the amount of assessment, with interest thereon, from the time of the confirmation of the report of the Commissioners, to the Collector of Assessments, before the delivery of the certificate.

The Act of 1853, relating to the Park, provides for levying a tax annually for the payment of interest on the stock to be issued; and the Act of 1813, made applicable to this loan, provides not only for pledging the faith of the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty for the final redemption of the stock issued, but also enacts that all the revenues of the Corporation "are hereby pledged and appropriated for the payment of the interest which shall become due on the said stock, and shall continue so pledged until the final redemption thereof; and that, in case the said revenues be not sufficient to satisfy and pay the whole of the said interest, then, and in that case, the faith of the State shall be, and it is hereby pledged to pass such acts as shall, from time to time, be necessary, authorizing the Mayor, &c., to raise by tax," such sum as shall be requisite to supply every such deficiency. In addition to this, the 7th section of the Act of 1853, for taking land for the Park, declares, that all the land thus taken shall be "irrevocably pledged" for the payment of the debt created thereby.

Each proposition should be sealed up and indorsed, "Proposal for five per cent. Central Park Fund," or "Proposal for Central Park six per cent. Fund," as the case may be. And the proposition for one or both funds may then be put in a second envelope, sealed and addressed, "A. C. FLAGG, Comptroller, No. 8 Hall of Records, New-York." A. C. FLAGG, Comptroller.

CLINTON LINE RAILROAD BONDS.—CLINTON LINE EXTENSION BONDS.—The above Bonds, now on sale, are Mortgage Bonds. Seven-per-cent. Bonds, with semi-annual Coupons attached, payable in the City of New-York, and secured on a large amount of value, with additional provision of a sinking fund.

These roads are connecting links in the chain of roads associated under the name of the American Central Railway, now in advanced progress of construction, with uninterrupted connection, by a continuous line of railway, from the Atlantic Ocean to the Missouri River—the longest, most direct, level and central, as well as the cheapest chain of railway on the continent.

The Clinton Line Railroad is the extension of the New-York and Erie and Sunbury and Erie Lines, from the point where they unite at the east line of Ohio, continuing the chain westward over the table lands of the Great Western Valley, opening the easiest and best communication with the great commercial centres of the West, avoiding ferries and drawbridges, and passing entirely over the Missouri River, and all unnecessary transhipments. It occupies exclusively the commanding route for the live stock traffic of the Western Valley.

The attention of all parties purposing investments of a safe and remunerative character, is invited to the more detailed exhibits of the Companies, which will be furnished them at the office of MEDICAL.

PRIVATE CONSULTATIONS.

DR. WATSON confines his practice to a certain class of cases, in which he has been unusually successful, and of which he has made a special study. He uses no mercury nor any other injurious medicine, but cures in a few days, by a safe and certain remedy, which does not interfere with business nor expose him to detection, while in most frequent cases there is a cure in twenty-four hours. Dr. WATSON does not wish to make cures, or cures more than deserve to be cures of certain diseases, and has injured by drugs, patients who secretly invited relief, but, in the first place, as there is no charge for consultations.
W. WATSON, M.D.,
Many years surgeon to the Lock Hospital, Author of "The Cause and Cure," numerous plates, 25, Chatham-st., fourth door west of Broadway.

THE GREATEST MEDICAL DISCOVERY OF THE AGE.—Dr. KENNEDY, of Roxbury, has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds, a remedy that cures every kind of humor, from the worst scrofula down to a common Pimple.

He has tried it in over 1,000 cases, and never failed, except in two cases, both blood humor. He has cure in his possession over 200 certificates of its virtues, all within 20 miles of Boston.

Two bottles are warranted to cure a surface sore mouth.

One to three bottles will cure the worst kind of pimples on the face.

Two to three bottles will clear the system of boils.

Two bottles are warranted to cure the worst canker in the mouth or stomach.

One to two bottles are warranted to cure all humor in the eyes.

Two bottles are warranted to cure running of the ears and blotches among the hair.

Four to six bottles are warranted to cure scorbut and running ulcers.

Two to three bottles are warranted to cure the worst case of ringworm.

Two to three bottles are warranted to cure the most desperate case of rheumatism.

Three to four bottles are warranted to cure the salt rheum.

Boston, I satisfied over a thousand bottles of this in the vicinity of Boston. I know the effects of it in every case. Its cure as water will extinguish fire, so sure will this cure humor. I never sold a bottle of it but that sold another; after a trial, it always speaks for itself. There are two things about this herb I am opposed to: one accidental, first, that it grows in our pastures, in some place quite plentiful, and yet its value has never been known until I discovered it in 1846; second, that it should cure all kinds of humor.

In order to give some idea of the sudden rise and great popularity of this discovery, I will state that in April, 1864, I peddled it, and sold seven six bottles per day. In April, 1864, I sold over a thousand bottles per day.

No change of diet over necessary—eat the best you can get, and enough of it.

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.—Adults, one table spoonful per day; children over 8 years, dessert spoonful; children from 3 to 8 years, tea-spoonful. As no directions can be applicable to all constitutions, take sufficient to operate on the bowels twice a day.

Mr. KENNEDY gives personal attendance in bad cases of Scrofula.

TO SUFFERING HUMANITY.—DR. HUNTER'S BOTANIC CORDIAL is the remedy for general and local Debility, Lost Power, Premature Old Age, Decay, and all the distressing consequences arising from early abuses, &c. Its effects are efficacious and salutary, beyond description, in youth manhood and old age; indeed, the virile powers would not become impaired, even in the decline of life, if the Cordial were universally adopted; all physical impediments vanish like magic before its influence, thus rendering its use invaluable to those entering the marriage state.

Dr. HUNTER'S GONORRHŒA SPECIFIC cures Gonorrhœa, however virulent; it is adapted for Gleet and Stricture, however long standing; likewise Gravel, Diseased Kidneys, and all diseases of the Genito-Urinary System, in either sex.

Dr. HUNTER'S RED DROP is the great remedy for the Venereal Disease in its different stages, Syphilis in all its various forms and secondary symptoms; it entirely supersedes the dangerous and indiscriminate use of Mercury, which too often causes the inevitable destruction of the constitution, and which all the Sarsaparilla in the world cannot remove.

Sold in cases, at $5 each, at the old established HUNTERIAN DISPENSARY, 76 Division-st., New-York.

Dr. HUNTER'S NEW MEDICAL WORK, THE VADE MECUM, giving the London, Paris and Vienna treatment, 500 pages, full of colored plates. Among its contents is the anatomy of the sexual organs of the male and female, all their diseases and weaknesses, lately discovered in respect to nature of construction, with analysis; nervous debility, local and general, from excess and indiscretion in youth. Price four shillings. To be had of Dr. HUNTER himself, No. 3 Division-st., New-York, long and favorably known to the public. He may be consulted gratis at his old-established office, where he has practiced in one branch of medicine for the last twenty-four years, and made more cures than any other man in the City, in many instances of persons considered incurable, some of which he has permission to refer to as heretofore. Charge moderate, and in all cases a cure guaranteed. Caution—My great remedy, HUNTER'S RED DROP, that cures the disease without drying it in poison in the blood, can only be had as here; it makes a speedy cure, without the least restriction in diet, drink, exercise or change of application to business. One bottle will cure the most inveterate case. Many are cured in a few hours.

TRIESEMAR—THE GREAT EUROPEAN DISCOVERY—Protected by Royal Letters Patent of England, and secured by the sales of the Ecole de Pharmacie de Paris, and the Imperial College of Medicine, Vienna.

TRIESEMAR No. 1.—Is the remedy of general and local debility, loss of virile power, premature decay, and all the distressing consequences arising from early abuse, &c. Its effects are efficacious in youth, manhood and old age; the virile powers are invigorated, even in the decline of life, if the Triesemar were universally adopted, all physical impediments vanish like magic before its influence, thus rendering its use invaluable to those entering the marriage state.

TRIESEMAR No. 2.—Completely and entirely eradicates all traces of those diseases the cowards and quacks have so long been thought an antidote for, to the ruin of the health of a vast portion of the population.

TRIESEMAR No. 3.—Is the great European remedy for that class of disorders which unfortunately the English Physician treats with mercury, to the inevitable destruction of the patient's constitution, and which all the Sarsaparilla in the world cannot remove.

TRIESEMAR No. 1, 2 and 3, are alike devoid of taste or smell, and all nauseating qualities. They may lay on the toilet table without their use being detected.

Sold in the cases at $3 each, or four cases in one for $9, which secures a cure in all cases, whether there is a wrong of 9 or 9, divided into separate doses, as administered by Valpeau, Lallemand, Roux, &c.

To be had, wholesale and retail, and forwarded immediately on receiving a remittance, to any part of the world by H. A. BARROW, M. D., No. 31 Greene-st, near Canal, New-York, who is appointed by the patentee to give advice to all patients in America. Consultation fee, if by letter, $5. A minute description of case, stating age, habits and avocation, are necessary. Attendance daily from 11 A. M. till 2 P. M., and from 4 to 8 P. M., (Sundays excepted) unless by previous appointment. No. 31 Greene-st. near Canal.

RICORD'S PRACTICE.—The undersigned, formerly a pupil with RICORD, of Paris, and with the celebrated Surgeons of this City, Drs. CARMICHAN and MOTT, may be consulted confidentially, in venereality, which also includes all diseases of the throat and lungs, at his conveniently located rooms, No. 516 Broadway, opposite the St. Nicholas Hotel, from 9 to 1 o'clock, and from 5 to 8 daily. He tenders to all afflicted positive assurance of relief, and those who have been abused by "specifics," antidotes, books, "no-mercury," &c., in the delusions of the numerous medical charlatans of the day, may rely on having their cases treated effectually, no matter how complicated they may appear. His extended observations in the famous Hospital du Midi, in Paris, under RICORD himself, together with the many new and efficient remedies of this eminent surgeon, render failure impossible. For the satisfaction of the interested it is proper here to state, that RICORD'S PRACTICE in sexual diseases—which comprehends the derangements of these organs as well—is the modern and only rational system (combining rapidity of cure with entire safety to the constitution) recognized by science, as it expressly rejects the old, empirical, secret, and hazardous employment of such pretended specifics as mercury, cubebs, copaiva &c. Recent cases cured without any delay, and the most candid information given in every instance. The subscriber's treatment of Consumption, constitutional, scrofulous, mercurial and nervous diseases, is based entirely on the modern and improved science of medicine, and has been eminently successful.

It may be mentioned, for the information of patients residing in the country or distant cities, that they can at any time consult the subscriber by letter, giving a plain statement of their case, when the necessary medicines adapted to it will be prepared and sent to them.

C. D. HAMMOND, M. D.,
Physician, Consulting and Operative Surgeon.

DR. LARMONT'S PARIS AND LONDON MEDICAL ADVISER AND MARRIAGE GUIDE.—Eleventh edition, 340 pages, 75 colored figures, cloth $1. Among its contents is the anatomy of the sexual organs of the male and female, all their diseases and weaknesses, latest discoveries in reproduction; quacks, their recipes and specifics; nervous debility, local and general, from excess and indiscretion in youth. The author's Paris and London treatment, from 11 to 2, and 5 to 9 P. M., No. 41 Reade-st., corner of No. 290 Broadway, New-York. His book is also sold at No. 128 Broadway. We recommend Dr. LARMONT to the afflicted. Courier des Etats Unis, Staats Zeitung, National Democrat, Day Book, Courier

NO CHARGE UNLESS CURED.—Dr. JOHNSON, No. 16 Duane-st., (Chatham Bank Building,) may be consulted with confidence on all diseases requiring mercury. His long experience of 24 years in this speciality of the profession enables him to treat successfully those who may have suffered from the malpractice of medical impostors, many of which are to be found in all large cities, but particularly in the City of New-York. Dr. J. being a graduate of N. Y. University, guarantees a cure in all cases undertaken. Hours from 6 A. M. to 8 P. M.

MEDICAL OFFICE.—Dr. COOPER, No. 14 Duane-st., better known at William-st. 24 years, may be consulted with confidence. His medicines are applicable to every form of disease; even the weakest of them can take them without fear of discovery. His medicines for nervous debility, after removing the disease, leave the system in a healthy condition, so that a man may look up to his sleep in heaven. Office hours from 8 o'clock A. M., to 8 o'clock P. M.

DR. CORBETT, No. 10 Duane-st., may be consulted with confidence on diseases. Twenty-three years in one specialty in the profession, enables him to treat with success all cases practised by the great Ricord of Paris, and all cases undertaken treated with the Paris and London treatment. M. D., Dr. C. is graduate of the New-York University. See his diplomas in his office.

TUESDAY, March 4—P. M.

The steamer Baltic, of the Collins line, from Liverpool Wednesday, Feb. 20, arrived at this port early in the forenoon. When she left Liverpool, twenty-eight days had transpired from the sailing of the missing steamer Pacific, and nothing had then been heard from her. The announcement of this fact to-day has greatly increased the apprehension felt for the safety of the crew and passengers of the unfortunate ship. The ship and cargo are heavily insured in Wall-street and in England, and if gone down will involve a loss of from $1,600,000 to $2,000,000 to the underwriters. There is, however, yet much time left for hope that no such disaster has attended this noble and favorite steamer. The money and market accounts by the Baltic show a slight improvement in the former, and a decidedly better feeling in some of the latter than the previous advices by the America. The stringency in discounts was a little less severe, and the price of the English Funds, under the announcement that the new loan would not exceed £8,000,000 Sterling, improved full 1 ⅌ cent., though part of the advance was lost at the close. The particulars of the arrangement of the New Loan we have copied below from the Money column of the London Times. The French Rente is quoted 78.95, or 1½ ⅌ cent. higher than by the previous packet. The Grain and Provision markets at Liverpool, particularly the former, evince a better spirit, and the English Wheat growers, at the provincial markets, manifest less eagerness to press their supplies. The sales of Cotton for three days are reported 27,000 bales at steady prices, buyers for some descriptions having slightly the advantage. In political affairs, the confidence of the public, both in Paris and London, continued to increase in the pacific result of the Conference of nations about to assemble at Paris. The American question was less thought of in English commercial circles, though it had somewhat affected trade in the Iron and Linen districts the week before this steamer sailed.

In the Stock Market, to-day, while the superior influence or determination of the party opposed to a rise in prices at the Brokers' Board was again successful in arresting any positive advance on the Share list, there was more done in the leading Railway Bonds, and a number of European orders in City loans was filled by private sale. The transactions in the active Road shares were mostly on time contracts; Erie 58¼@58¾ cash; 58 seller's option, and 58¾ buyer's option. After the official list at the Second Board was printed, 1,000 shares were taken at 58⅜@58¾ ⅌ cent. The sellers of Cleveland and Toledo, who stood off at the morning session, made sales in the afternoon as low as 77⅝, option to deliver in 60 days. Reading was also sold down ⅛ ⅌ cent., Illinois Central Bonds brought 88 ⅌ cent., Erie Sinking Funds 90, and New-York Central 7s, 102 ⅌ cent. The general market closed steady. We have to repeat that the position of many of the leading members of the Stock Exchange appears, for the moment, to be opposed to a rise, although the easy state of the Money Market is against their views, and no concern appears to be felt in Bank about the export movement of half a million of Specie by the steamer to-morrow, or the stiffness of Exchange. The increase in the line of Loans and Discounts exhibited in the Official Averages published this morning is commented upon in the Street. The result is one that has not unreasonably followed the accumulation of local deposits and country bank balances, since the first of the new year, without having a very direct relation to the Specie reserve, which is felt to be quite strong for the present season of the year. A comparison of the movement from the close of December will show the basis of the increased employment by the Banks of the Money which has accumulated on their hands:

	Dec. 29, 1855.	March 1, 1856.
Capital	$48,649,000	$49,043,000
Actual Deposits	56,784,000	61,267,000
Specie	19,788,000	18,640,000
Loans	98,114,000	105,893,000

The increase in Banking Capital and in undrawn Deposits since the New-Year is $11,501,000, of which $4,852,000 has accumulated in Coin, while the increase in Loans and Discounts is only $7,518,000. Last year in March the export of Specie from New-York and Boston was $4,228,000, of which the New-York Banks appear to have lost only $684,000—the remainder being supplied from California.

The Sub-Treasury received to-day $198,066; disbursed $49,042, and held at the close a regular balance of $3,321,007.

The business in Government Land Warrants is thus quoted to-day by Mr. J. THOMPSON, Banker, No. 2 Wall-street:

	Buying.	Selling.
60 and 120 acres	$1 07	$1 07 ⅌ acre.
80 and 160 acres	1 14	1 12½ ⅌ acre.
40 acres	1 12½	1 15 ⅌ acre.

We correct for our paper, that goes to Europe by the packet to-morrow, the quotations for the following securities by the latest sales at the Stock Exchange to-day:

The Treasury Department of the Federal Government continues to buy United States Stocks of 1867-8 at 116 and interest. The Third Mortgage of the Erie Company and the Illinois Free lands are quoted ex coupon by the present packet. The sales of Foreign bills to-day were within the above quotations. The importing trade were not large buyers. Yesterday, the Bankers took up nearly all the first-class bills offering at or below 109¾, and advanced their own rates to 109⅝@¾. The steamer takes $500,000 in bullion.

TRANSLATED EXTRACT.

NEW-YORK, Tuesday, March 4, 1856.

For two or three days after our advices of the 25th February, various rumors, about the state of relations between the American and English Governments, created in our Stock market a feeling of uneasiness; but since the publication of the diplomatic correspondence between the two Cabinets in relation to the Enlistment question, a general conviction of the pacific solution of present difficulties has again affected the market favorably. Had it not been for the increasing abundance of money, fluctuations no doubt would have been greater, but owing to this circumstance the Stock market has varied but little, as may be noticed in our subjoined table of daily quotations; and with the exception of a fractional decline on some of the State securities, rates are well maintained since last week. The news by the steamer of 20th February, from Liverpool, has not sensibly affected the firmness of the market. The Secretary of the Treasury, having been notified by Texas of the acceptance by that State of the terms imposed by the act making appropriation for the Texas indemnity amounting to $1,750,000, announces that payment of claims will be made out after the 1st of June next. The larger portion of these claims being held in Philadelphia, Baltimore and New-York, these payments in specie insure the certainty of a considerable accession to the metallic reserves of the Banks of these cities during the course of next Summer. State Stocks—moderate transactions have taken place in Virginia 6 ⅌ cents., Missouri 6 ⅌ cents., Indiana 5 ⅌ cents., with a slight decline, and also in Ohio 6 ⅌ cents., 1860, without change in rates

City and County Bonds—There has been a demand in small amounts for various securities of this class. Transactions in Milwaukie and St. Louis Cities have been among the most important, the former at a rise of 2½ ⅌ cent, the latter at fully maintained rates. San Francisco 10s are scarce and higher. We notice also some sales of bonds of some of the Kentucky counties. Railroad Bonds. Illinois Central Construction have been in moderate demand at advancing rates. New-York Central 6s, Erie 7s, 1871 and 1875, and Hudson 3d Mortgage, the latter have risen 2½ ⅌ cent. Erie, 1871 and 1875, and also Illinois Freeland, are and are quoted ex interest. In Bonds at private sale, we have nothing special to notice. Railroad Stocks—Our quotations of Railroad Stocks are well maintained. Transactions in Erie, Reading, Cleveland and Toledo, New-York Central, and Hudson River, have been animated. In Michigan Southern, Panama, Chicago and Rock Island, Cleveland and Pittsburg, and Galena and Chicago, the business has been moderate. Money is easy at 6@7 ⅌ cent. for loans on call. Discounts of business paper from 7@9 ⅌ cent. Exchanges are not abundant, but the demand is limited. Principal sales on London 109¼@109½. Bankers held as high as 109¾. Paris 5.17½@5.18¾.

Money Circular for England.

NEW-YORK, Tuesday, March 4, 1856.

The misunderstanding between the Governments of Great Britain and the United States has checked the buoyancy and activity which existed at the date of our last report, 19th ult., and imparted a rather feverish tone to the Stock market. Some anxiety naturally exists as to the result of the questions at issue, but it is generally expected that they will be amicably settled. The confidence felt on this point, in connection with the increased probability of the restoration of peace in Europe, having sustained prices, the fluctuations, although frequent, have not been important, and the annexed quotations show generally but slight changes from those contained in our last list. The business of the fortnight has been comparatively limited.

The principal changes in State Stocks are a decline of ¼ ⅌ cent. on Virginia and 1 on Missouri 6s. Kentucky 6s are 1 ⅌ cent. higher. For Illinois internal improvement 6s, 107 is bid, without sellers. City Stocks continue firm, with an upward tendency in some instances. The Comptroller of the City of New-York advertises for proposals, to be received until April 7th, for $2,000,000, 5 ⅌ cent. Stock, redeemable 1st July, 1895, interest payable quarterly, and $1,000,000, 6 ⅌ cent. Stock, redeemable 6th February, 1859, interest payable semi-annually. Both loans are designated as "Central Park Fund Stock," and for the payment of the debt thus created, the land taken for the park is irrevocably pledged. The law provides for the levy of an annual tax to pay the interest.

In Railroad Bonds we have to notice an improvement of 2 ⅌ cent. in Reading 1st Mortgage, 2 ⅌ cent. on Erie Convertibles of 1871, and 1 ⅌ cent. in New-York Central 6s and 7s, Illinois Central Construction, and Freeland and New-York and Harlem 1st Mortgage Bonds. The recent negotiation, by the last-named Company, of $750,000 2d Mortgage Bonds, at 75 ⅌ cent., has had a favorable effect on the price of both its bond and preferred stock. The Bonds of the Toledo and Illinois and Lake Erie, Wabash, and St. Louis Railroads have also an upward tendency; 154 miles of the line are now in operation, and 16 miles additional will be opened by 10th inst. For other descriptions of securities of this class prices are unchanged, but generally firm.

There is but little animation in the market for Railroad Shares. The only important changes are an advance of 2 ⅌ cent. on Reading, and a decline of 3 on Cleveland and Toledo.

In Money matters there is no important new feature. The supply on call continues abundant at 6 to 7, and in some instances Loans have been made at 5 ⅌ cent. Discount on first-class paper ranges from 6 to 8 ⅌ cent. The Banks discount freely, and the weekly returns show a rapid increase of Loans.

The increase of Loans during the last fortnight is $3,239,228, and the loss of Specie $338,008.

Foreign Exchanges are higher and firm. The shipments of Specie for the fortnight have been small, $745,750, while the receipts of Gold from California amount to $1,469,712.

NEW-YORK, Tuesday, March 4, 1856.

Since our advices of 25th ult. the stock market has been held in check by the rumors circulated on the enlistment difficulties now occupying the British and American Governments. Business, in consequence, has been restricted, and quotations unsteady. Since the official correspondence has been made public a more confident feeling has prevailed, but thus far without giving more life to the stock market. Money continues abundant, and the export of coin unimportant. On the 1st of June the United States Government will pay out the $1,750,000 reserved for the Texas creditors. The steamer America, whose mails were delivered last night, brought out considerable orders for American stocks. The news per Baltic, received this day, has produced but little impression on the market. State stocks have been dull, with a slight decline. Illinois Internal Improvement, of 1847, in demand at 114. City and County Bonds are in active and increasing demand, both for home and foreign account. By the America and Baltic the orders in these have been

NEW-YORK, TUESDAY, MARCH 4.

The New English Loan.

From the London Times, Feb. 19.

MONDAY EVENING.

This being the day for the announcement of the conditions of the new loan, the English funds have experienced considerable fluctuation. Consols for money, which left off on Saturday at 90¼ to ⅞, were first quoted 90⅝ to ¾, whence, in consequence of some heavy sales, they declined to 90⅜. They then recovered to 90⅝, but presented an unsettled appearance until a telegraphic message from the west-end notified that the loan is to be for only £15,000,000, when a sudden rise took place to 91 to ¾. It had not been stated that there was also to be a funding of 3,000,000 of Exchequer bills, and when this additional intelligence was received the market partially lost its buoyancy, and a reaction occurred to 90⅞ to 91, which was the final quotation. For the account, the last price was 91⅛ to ¼. The favorable effect produced by the smallness of the loan was, to some extent, counteracted by the haste with which it is to be called up, the interval between the payment of the deposit of 20 ⅌ cent. on Tuesday next and the final installment being scarcely more than eight weeks. The last loan was called up at an average rate of about a million a fortnight, while in the present instance the average will be about a million and a quarter a fortnight, and its influence, therefore, as regards the demand for money and the pressure of new stock on the market during the short period over which the operation is to extend, will be much greater, although the amount is only £5,000,000, than that which was produced within a corresponding period by the loan for £16,000,000. There is no doubt, however, that any material disturbance caused by it from time to time in the money market, will be limited to a day or two about the date of each installment, since all the payments will be disbursed by the Government nearly as fast as they are received. It is understood that Messrs. ROTHSCHILD intend to open a list book for the new loan and the funding of Exchequer bills, and that a circular to that effect will be issued to-morrow. No other list has been spoken of.

There was a numerous attendance of capitalists at the Treasury to-day to receive information with regard to the proposed loan and funding of Exchequer Bills. The Government were represented by Lord PALMERSTON, Sir G. C. LEWIS, Sir ALEXANDER SPEARMAN, and Mr. J. WILSON. The Governor and Deputy-Governor of the Bank also attended. Among the persons connected with the moneyed interest were Baron ROTHSCHILD, Baron L. L. GOLDSMID, Messrs. R. & T. THORNTON, J. HUBBENSUCK, J. CAPEL, W. H. MULLINS, PESCOTT, T. A. HANKEY, LAWRENCE, M. URIELLI, NORBURY, CASENOVE, SIMES, W. A. WILKINSON, HUNTER, C. MCGAREL, B. B. WILLIAMS, L. COHEN, BURNAND, H. SYMES, &c.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer read first the particulars of the proposed loan, which are subjoined. The announcement of the small amount of £5,000,000 created surprise.

PARTICULARS OF LOAN.

1. The loan to be for the sum of £5,000,000 sterling.

2. For over £100 subscribed in money the Contractors to receive 3 per cent. Consolidated Annuities, and the biddings to be made in such annuities.

3. The interest on the 3 per cent. Consolidated Annuities to commence from the 5th of Jan., 1856.

4. The days of payment and the proportions of the contributions to be as follows:

On Tuesday, Feb. 26, 1856, deposit of £20 per cent.
On Thursday, March 13, 1856, deposit of £20 per cent.
On Saturday, March 29, 1856, deposit of £20 per cent.
On Thursday, April 10, 1856, deposit of £10 per cent.
On Thursday, April 24, 1856, deposit of £15 per cent.

5. For each installment after the deposit a proportional amount of stock to be created for the contributors. The stock for the deposit to be created at the same time with that which will then be due on the last installment.

6. Scrip receipts will be issued by the Bank in the usual manner.

7. The biddings to be made at the Treasury, on Friday, 22d, at 10 o'clock in the morning.

The Chancellor then brought forward his proposal for funding Exchequer Bills, as follows. In this case, also, the limited extent of the operation was also a subject of remark.

FUNDING.—The amount of Exchequer Bills to be funded will be £3,000,000.

The deposit will be 20 per cent. on the 26th of February; and the installments 20 per cent. on the 13th of March; 20 per cent. on the 29th of March; 20 per cent. on the 10th of April; 10 per cent. on the 24th of April; the Contractors for the loan to have the option of contracting for the Exchequer Bill funding on the same terms as shall be accepted for the loan.

In the event of the contractors wishing to pay money instead of Exchequer Bills, it will be received at £100 5s. money for every £100 of Exchequer Bills.

In answer to questions from Baron ROTHSCHILD, Mr. L. COHEN and others, it was stated by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, that the total amount of the unfunded debt in existence is about £32,000,000, and that no discount will be allowed for prepayment of installments, the shortness of the period over which they are spread rendering it unnecessary. Should the parties who take the loan refuse the option offered in connection with the proposed funding, the Government, it was said, will, when the biddings are made on Friday, state the terms they are prepared to accept.

With reference to the payment of installments, Baron ROTHSCHILD wished to understand clearly whether contractors would be liable after the payment of the deposit. In the late case of the Turkish Loan, some subscribers not having paid upon their scrip on the precise day the installment fell due, the Bank of England applied immediately afterwards to the contractors to make good the amount. The sum was not large, but if such a precedent were to be established, it might lead to inconvenience. In ordinary transactions the holders of the scrip, after the payment of the deposit, were considered responsible.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer was understood to state, in reply, that there was no intention to depart from the rules adopted in former loans.

Baron ROTHSCHILD, Mr. R. THORNTON, and Mr. HUBBENSUCK desired to be informed if the Government contemplated any further immediate loan operations, to which the Chancellor of the Exchequer replied that the only information he was in a position to give, was that no similar financial measures will be taken during the period in which the present loan and funding are in progress.

Mr. R. THORNTON said he was not desirous of pressing the question, but it would be satisfactory to ascertain the intention in this respect, since the smallness of the amount proposed, and the rapidity of the payments, would induce the public to believe that the Government was very much in want of money.

Lord PALMERSTON—Of course, we are in want of money, or we should not offer to take a loan.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER—The public must be allowed to draw what conclusion they like; but I cannot give any further information than that which has already been stated.

The whole of the parties then retired.
